IT'S OFFICIAL: NO VOTE IN '78

VANCOUVER — It's now official — there will not be a provincial election in B.C. this year.

Premier Bennett, who has been saying for the last two weeks that election speculation was created by the media not himself, finally gave a flat "no" to election questions.

Before Friday, he had contended himself with "I am not thinking about an election, I am not talking about an election," but he always left the possibility that there could be.

At a press conference after his speech to the annual Social Credit convention here, he provided the standard answer first, but when reporters repeated "Will there be an election this year?" he smiled and said "There could be a federal election and there will be municipal elections."

"Will there be a provincial election?"

"No."

'We won't mortgage the future'

SOCREDS CHEER BENNETT'S RESTRAINTS POLICY

By JIM HUME
Colonist reporter

VANCOUVER — Close to 1,500 delegates to the annual Social Credit convention here Friday gave a wild standing ovation to Premier Bennett's pledge that "we will not mortgage the future of our young."

Bennett made the emotional pledge at the midway point in his keynote speech to the 1,450 delegates registered by 11 a.m.

"We will not be party to reckless spending, wild spending, stupid spending," he said. "We will not mortgage the future of our young to the money-lenders. No way. We will deliver the services our people need and we will do it without creating a burden of crushing debt.

"We have seen what the burden of debt has done to young countries, young governments. We will not let it happen here."

The premier, whose speech was interrupted throughout with applause, promised to continue his efforts to eliminate red tape in government — "red tape which throttles opportunity. We will give you good government, but less government."

The premier drew laughter and applause from a challenge issued to Opposition leader David Barrett whose New Democratic Party recently published a pamphlet critical of government activities.

"I'll make an offer to Mr. Barrett," the premier said. "If he will deliver the pamphlets to us I'll give him a personal guarantee that we will deliver them for him, during our operation doorstep, to every household in the province—because those leaflets say much more about them than about us."

Operation doorstep is a Social Credit door-knocking campaign which promises to cover every household in the province over the next several months.

Bennett said the NDP leaflet "does not contain one positive thought." It is full of criticism, negatives, without one single positive proposal. It tells us a great deal about them at a time when positive proposals, positive thinking is needed as never before in this country.

"They don't deserve to be the alternative to government in this province."

The premier continued to hammer away at his ideas on constitutional reform but suggested that delegates not become confused with technicalities.

"What we are asking is a fair voice in the council of Canada," he said. "We ask only a fair voice in our country's affairs. I will take that message to Ottawa again on your behalf.

"They (the federal government) cannot ignore the West any longer. Other voices should not be louder than ours.

"Our country will remain strong only as long as its parts are strong. If the parts grow weak, then we shall not

CUPW vows court battles over law, injunction bids

OTTAWA (CP) — The defiant Canadian Union of Postal Workers said Friday it will challenge the government's back-to-work bill in court and will keep workers on illegal picket lines despite the fact that the government is seeking injunctions to break the strike.

CUPW President Jean-Claude Parrot said in a news conference the workers will stay out as long as it takes them to get a collective agreement.

"You want to mail a letter? Just try it," Parrot said when asked if the majority of the 23,000-workers would stay out despite the back-to-work orders.

Parrot said at a news conference the union is hiring lawyers to fight government applications for injunctions to stop picketing at postal facilities across the country.

The first such application was made in Toronto late Friday. Others were due in Halifax, Montreal, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

At the same time the union planned to challenge the entire back-to-work bill passed by Parliament Wednesday.

"Only slaves cannot withdraw their labor and postal workers will never agree to become slaves," said the tough-talking Parrot.

Justice Minister Otto Lang had announced in the Commons earlier Friday that officials from his department were gathering evidence to use against strikers violating the provisions of back-to-work legislation passed by Parliament Wednesday.

He said the government would seek injunctions to stop picketing and thus permit those CUPW workers who wanted to return to work to do so.

Under the legislation union members face fines of $100 a day for every day they are on an illegal strike.

The union leaders face a fine of $2,500 plus $250 a day and the union itself could pay $10,000.

Several of Lang's officials turned up in the small interview room in the basement of the Parliament Buildings where Parrot spoke with reporters.

Before the news conference started, the justice department officials were requested to leave by Mike Duffy, a CBC television reporter and an executive of the press gallery.

Parrot had told Duffy he would rather give his interview without the justice department officials in the room and they left without

On Island, some on job, most off

This was the situation Friday on Vancouver Island and throughout B.C., as seen by postal workers and post office management:

A management spokesman said workers were on the job in 31 of the province's 60 post offices. But he conceded that they were located in small centres and involved only a minimum of the province's postal workers.

A union official in Victoria said later that workers who had returned to the job in some areas had since walked out again.

On Vancouver Island, the workers were out in the main centres of Victoria, Duncan, Nanaimo and Port Alberni. But management said they had reported for work at Ladysmith, Parksville, Courtenay and Port Hardy.

LETTER CARRIERS in Ottawa have learned there is safety in numbers. Early Friday morning they assembled in a parking lot near the main post office and marched through picket lines formed by inside workers. There had been scuffles on Thursday when carriers crossed lines to get to work.

A touch of irony for post office: 'Peace' cuts loss

OTTAWA (CP) — Smooth labor-management relations in the fiscal year ended March 31 helped reduce the post office deficit to $559 million, the post office said in its 1977-78 annual report tabled Friday in the Commons.

The report, released in the midst of a widespread illegal strike by inside postal workers, painted an optimistic picture of post office operations.

"The past year is one of which Canada Post employees can be proud," the report said.

"Strike-free service, the increasingly efficient functioning of the modern facilities, more realistic postal rates and primarily the conscientious work of employees contributed to a decline in the operating deficit and a reduction in the subsidization of postal service through general taxation."

The report for the current fiscal year will tell a different story.

The generally-moderate Letter Carriers Union of Canada held rotating strikes last month before signing a contract agreement with the government.

And the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) Friday continued to defy a back-to-work order passed by Parliament Wednesday.

Must revive summit, Dayan urges Carter

Colonist wire services

Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan said Friday he and Defence Minister Ezer Weizman would leave Washington today and return home to recommend a new Camp David-style summit to overcome "difficulties" in the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty talks.

Dayan said in order to overcome the snags in the negotiations, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Prime Minister Menachem Begin should hold another summit with President Carter's active participation as an intermediary.

"There are difficulties in the talks but I would not define it as a crisis," he told the Israeli national television in an interview from Washington.

Dayan said he hoped that in the end there would be a treaty but added, "We don't want peace at any price."

"The two delegations do not have the authority to make decisions on their own," he said. "In order to really arrive at an agreement the two heads of state are needed."

He said he "would certainly recommend" that Sadat and Begin finish the job of negotiating a treaty—preferably in Washington—"and President Carter would get involved like he did at Camp David, entering the rooms of one and the other."

Shortly after the Israelis announced their plans to leave Washington, both sides were summoned to the White House for separate talks with President Carter and an Egyptian negotiator said he, too, would leave for consultations in Cairo.

Lung cancer triples in Canadian women

TORONTO (CP) — The number of Canadian women suffering from lung cancer has increased threefold in 15 years and is still rising, says the executive director of the Canadian Cancer Society.

Dr. Robert Macbeth said Friday that from 1960 to 1975 the incidence of lung cancer among men doubled but tripled among women.

"We are now reaping the harvest of having women take up smoking."

Macbeth said Canadian figures compare with those released after a five-year U.S. study which showed an alarming increase in lung cancer among women.

He said that among women there were 10.9 deaths per 100,000 caused by lung cancer in 1975 and 3.6 per 100,000 in 1960. The rate for men increased to 48.2 per 100,000 from 25.22 per 100,000 in 1960.

Picket lines parted by immigrant's fear

But goodwill gesture may not last

Only two of 240 Victoria postal workers bucked the trend Friday and returned to the job—one of them, oddly enough, with the approval of his union.

But that gesture of "good will" was expected to end abruptly because the union didn't think the facts of the case were quite what they had appeared to be.

Officers of the Victoria local of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers agreed to let the man pass through the picket line Friday because he was an immigrant and was afraid he would be deported if he broke the law.

Daniel Stewart, first vice-president of the local, said later, however, that the man was already a naturalized Canadian citizen and as such could not be deported for anything other than a subversive crime. For that reason the union would not likely give approval to further trips through the picket line.

Stewart looked on Friday's action as a sort of one-day "grace period" extended to the man because of his "very real fear."

"As I understand it, he had a very tough time becoming a citizen. After he was here his birth certificate was lost and he had a lot of trouble as a result," said Stewart.

"He is a frightened man. His fear is very real. But since he is now a citizen, it is unfounded."

He said union members would try to convince him that he had nothing to be afraid of.

Firestone Canada joins massive tire recall

Firestone Canada Inc. will announce next week the voluntary recall of an estimated one million of its problem-plagued Firestone 500 steel-belted radial tires, a company spokesman confirmed in Hamilton, Ont., Friday.

Joseph Barbera said the recall will cost Firestone about $23 million.

The announcement followed an agreement between the parent Firestone company and the U.S. government Friday to recall 10 million of the tires in the U.S. at a tax-deductible cost of $230 million to the firm.

Barbera said the company would detail the procedures of the recall and when it will start next week. Owners of new cars that were purchased with the radials on them would probably be sent letters by Firestone telling them what they should do.

U.S. Transportation Secretary Brock Adams said the recall actually involves about 7.5 million tires still in use. Others have been discarded or turned into dealers for adjustments.

Adams said the recall includes a large portion of the 1975 and 1976 production of 500s and Firestone tires sold under other brand names, including Shell Oil Co.'s Super Shell Steel Radials. (In Canada, Uniroyal, not Firestone, manufactures tires sold by Shell.)

Firestone also will recall 1975 and 1976 TPC steel-belted radials which were original equipment on new General Motors cars.

Adams said the U.S. government decided to work out a voluntary agreement with Firestone instead of going to court because it wants to "get those tires off the road. . . We can't measure lives against dollars."

In Akron, Ohio, Firestone Chairman Richard Riley said the company agreed to the recall not because it believes the tires are faulty, but because "there has been so much publicity. . . The thought that there is a defect has been implanted so strongly that we have to convince our customers that we are interested in their welfare."

Those receiving free replacements must own tires manufactured between March 1, 1975 and cutoff dates which vary with different models.

Steel belted 500s in the five-rib tread design will be included if manufactured before Jan. 1, 1977. Those in the seven-rib tread design and Firestone TPC radials will be in the recall if made before May 1, 1976. Tires made after those cutoff dates were improved in quality and performance, Adams said.

Persons owning Firestone 500s not included in the recall can bring them in and receive a 50-per-cent adjustment toward purchase of the newer Firestone 721 model, Adams said.

Those who already have traded in defective 500s and paid part of the cost of a new tire will receive a cash payment which will provide them a full refund for their new tire.

Most of the radials involved in the Canadian recall bear the Firestone name although a small number have private brand names, a spokesman said. He refused to name the private brands.

Although the American recall involved an agreement between the company and the government, there have been no negotiations between the Canadian government and Firestone.

13 sailors lost in ship crash

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — The U.S. Coast Guard reported 13 of its men missing in the upper Chesapeake Bay off Smith Point on Friday night after the coast guard cutter Cuyahoga collided with the coal freighter Santa Cruz II and sank in 12 metres of water. Seventeen men were rescued.

Yukon chief charged in mining case

WHITEHORSE Yukon (CP) — Art Pearson, who stepped aside as Yukon commissioner Thursday, was charged Friday with four criminal offences relating to mining claims.

RCMP said the charges were laid at a private session between RCMP Sgt. George Wool, head of the commercial crime section here, and a Whitehorse justice of the peace.

Summonses were issued ordering Pearson to appear in court Nov. 2.

RCMP said the charges are issuing a false statement, uttering forged documents and two others relating to affidavits. The charges are connected with the transfer of mining claims nine years ago, long before Pearson became commissioner.

Pearson said Thursday that he was stepping aside as commissioner because his lawyer informed him that the charges were pending. A wildlife biologist, he was appointed commissioner in July 1976.

RCMP also laid eight charges against Fred Stretch, a notary public here in connection with the Pearson charges.

Pearson's administration has been marred by controversy over allegations of improprieties involving a Whitehorse lawyer.

The lawyer, Al Lueck, was charged with unprofessional conduct in 1977 when he held a news conference to announce his resignation as lawyer for the Council of Yukon Indians.

The Yukon legal department said Lueck breached solicitor-client conduct by making certain remarks at the conference.

The charges later were withdrawn and there were allegations that Pearson, a personal friend, had ordered the territorial legal department to stop the proceedings.

An inquiry said Pearson made errors in judgment in the Lueck affair but had not committed any breaches of duty. Pearson announced he was quitting, however, saying he didn't want the controversy to be an issue in the Yukon election.

The election was to be held Nov. 20 and Pearson agreed to stay on until federal Northern Affairs Minister Hugh Faulkner found a successor.

Pearson talked to Faulkner Wednesday and it was agreed that assistant commissioner Doug Bell would take over the Yukon administration.

Ottawa official scorches U.S. agency over recall

OTTAWA (CP) — A transport department official Friday criticized the United States auto safety agency for forcing Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. to recall 10 million of its 500-line steel-belted radials when the agency had failed to find anything wrong with tested tires.

Harold Scharbach, a compliance auditor with the road and motor vehicle traffic safety branch, said the method the U.S. National Highway Traffic Safety Administration in Washington used to reach its decision is unprecedented.

"It's unprecedented that (there has been) a recall based on, well, I wouldn't want to say hearsay, but this method based on surveys (of complaints) has never been used before."

Scharbach said his department has not found any inherent defect in the tires it has tested and that the U.S. auto safety agency hasn't either.

"The U.S. didn't find a defect," he said, adding that he didn't think the safety administration had even bothered to test the tires extensively, basing its judgment instead on information gathered from Firestone itself, other tire manufactures and consumers.

Firestone and the U.S. government announced Friday that the company will voluntarily recall 10 million tires—the largest such recall in history—and replace them free with the new line Firestone 721 radials.

The U.S. safety administration first recommended the tires be recalled in July after analysing 6,000 consumer reports alleging "more than 14,000 individual tire failures, 29 deaths, more than 50 injuries and hundreds of property damage accidents."

But Scharbach said his department had regularly found signs of abuse or neglect such as nail holes in tires it had tested after receiving consumer complaints.

Scharbach said one reason the U.S. agency called for the recall was because the company had replaced more tires for unsatisfied customers than other tire manufacturers surveyed.

"Firestone has a very generous replacement policy," he said. "They replace everything. So of course they're going to have a higher replacement rate than another manufacturer with a different policy.

Family found dead by grave of daughter

BARRYVILLE, N.B. (CP) — "Two of the kids were in the front and three in the back," a nine-year-old resident of this community said Friday night. "I thought they were asleep."

The boy was describing how, as he walked through a churchyard in this northeastern New Brunswick village on his way to school Friday he found a car with the bodies of a man and his five children.

RCMP later said Alvin Brideau, 44, and the children—ranging in age from 10 to two years—died as a result of asphyxiation. The father had taken his children for a drive, waited until they were asleep and then parked the car with the engine running, connected a pipe to the exhaust system and ran it into the passenger compartment.

Brideau had parked the car directly in front of the grave of another of his children, a young daughter, who was killed last year in a house fire.

Neighbors say he had been depressed since his wife left him about 10 days ago and went to Nova Scotia. He took the children everywhere he went in the family car, afraid they would be taken away by welfare officials.

CUPW vows court fights

argument after Duffy asked them to leave.

Duffy said the room is regarded as part of the Press Gallery facilities and not open to the general public.

With cameras rolling, Parrot said he was not worried about workers going back to work in a few smaller centres.

Some also went back during the seven-week strike in 1975, "but we always had more than 95 per cent on the street and we will have more than 95 per cent out this time, too."

When a reporter said 2,000 workers had returned to their jobs, Parrot shot back: "That's a lie."

He said workers in Sault Ste. Marie, Ont. had voted 100 per cent to stay off the job "and they said if they were thrown in jail, their wives would take over the picket line duty."

The back-to-work bill provides for appointment of a mediator-arbitrator who would have authority to make binding rulings on all contract clauses that could not be settled through mediation.

The bill stipulates that the collective agreement would be retroactive to June 30, 1977—when the last contract expired—and would stay in effect until the end of 1979.

Parrot said the bill "retroactively eliminates the choice we were given under the Public Service Staff Relations Act between the arbitration and conciliation-strike routes in the event of a dispute."

"The law is highly discriminatory and the union is attacking its validity in court."

The union chose the conciliation-strike route when it served notice to bargain, meaning that the workers could withdraw their labor if they were unable to negotiate a satisfactory contract.

After the failure Monday night of a final negotiation attempt by acting labor minister Andre Ouellet, the union called its members out on a national strike.

On Tuesday, the government introduced its back-to-work bill in the Commons and by 12:01 a.m. Thursday it was law.

Parrot said the bill, which stripped workers of their legal right to strike and overruled the union's earlier decision to take the conciliation-strike route, was "in total violation of the United Nations International Bill of Human Rights, which every free society supports and which condemns both retroactivity in the law and special legislation designed to eliminate the rights of a single group in society."

The union president said CUPW will oppose any application for injunctions to stop picket line activity.

"Our lawyers across the country are ready and available to fight if the government proceeds with its plans to file for injunctions.

"Our rights to freely associate, to negotiate and to strike are basic—all 23,000 of our members will stand firm to maintain these rights, as will their union and the entire labor movement."

Executives of the 2.3-million-member Canadian Labor Congress met all afternoon to discuss the CUPW situation and in the end decided not to issue a public statement.

The application for a back-to-work injunction in Toronto will be heard in provincial court Monday. The application for the Toronto injunction named 16 officers or CUPW members who had resisted the back-to-work legislation.

Larry Olsson of Toronto, Ontario regional director of the justice department, said the individuals were union officials and members who had been seen on picket lines.

In the Commons Friday, Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne said the government had temporarily held off measures against the strikers to give them an opportunity to return to work.

Lamontagne has accused union leaders of intimidating the members.

Parrot heatedly denied that Friday, saying the government was the party guilty of using threats and intimidation.

"As far as the injunctions are concerned, it is by no means sure that the court will buy the governments arguments. When CUPW was on strike in 1974, the government tried to get injunctions forcing us to remove the picket lines twice."

Parrot said the government's first attempt in 1974 for a back-to-work injunction failed. The second time the judge "refused to issue the injunction for seven days, saying he was forcing a delay because he felt it would be far better if the government resolved the issue by mediation than by coercion."

Lamontagne said in the Commons a militant minority of postal workers were preventing the others from returning to work.

Lincoln Alexander (PC—Hamilton West) criticized the government for "foot-dragging" in moving to end the illegal strike.

John Fraser (PC—Vancouver South) asked why the government had not yet named the mediator-arbitrator to be appointed under the act.

have the future we all hope for."

The premier attends a first minister's conference in Ottawa at month-end.

Displaying rare oratorial form, the premier said his government had "one single goal—a secure future for all British Columbians with opportunity for all."

Without mentioning the party by name he attacked the NDP for its close alliance with organized labor.

"We are a party of the people," he said. "We will never sell out to any power group. The CCF sold out to a power group and while the group they represent has a strong place in our society, no one group has any greater rights than another.

"We do not close our door on anyone. We welcome all people, whatever their walk of life. Trade unions have a rightful place in our society and no one in this party should ever forget that.

"They have aims and aspirations to which we listen and encourage because hundreds, thousands of our members are staunch trade union supporters.

"But we say—equal opportunity for all, special privilege for none."

In touching on the highlights of his government during the past three years, Bennett said he wanted to see education in B.C. developed to the point where "it will be our greatest legacy when our mandate is through. Our youth will be more secure because they will be educated to work—and the work will be there for them."

He repeated a promise made several times in recent weeks, of tax relief for homeowners next spring.

"There will be help in the next budget," he said. "We want to make sure that you can not only own your own home, but can afford to live in it."

Friend ponders actor's suicide

'His own private hell'

NEW YORK (AP) — "I think he probably had his own private hell going on inside him," a friend of actor Gig Young said Friday, in an attempt to account for why the Academy Award winner apparently murdered his bride of three weeks and then killed himself.

"Knowing Gig as I knew him, it would have to be . . . an explosive, uncontrollable, emotional act," said restaurateur Patrick Shields.

Det.-Sgt. Louis Monaco said police would try to determine a motive by talking to friends but added: "There may never be an explanation. Only he knew.

"He might have just flipped and killed his wife and then killed himself, I don't know."

Young, who won an Oscar in 1969 for his role in They Shoot Horses, Don't They? was found Thursday night face down on the bedroom floor in his $70,000 co-operative apartment.

The 60-year-old actor had shot himself in the mouth with a .38-calibre Smith and Wesson revolver. Beside him was his wife, Kim Schmidt, a writer, who met Young in Hong Kong. She had been shot in the head.

Dr. Michael Baden, assistant medical examiner, officially designated the deaths as murder-suicide after conducting autopsies.

No note was found. Friends who had talked to the couple in recent days had no intimation of what was to come.

Monaco said there was no evidence of alcohol or drug abuse. "There weren't any open pill bottles around. There weren't any pills around at all, to speak of. There were no empty liquor glasses or bottles around. It was a very neat, well-furnished apartment."

Young had purchased the two-bedroom apartment in the Victorian-era building on West 57th Street near Carnegie Hall about six months ago and the couple had hired a contractor to make some renovations.

Monaco said they had been staying there for at least the last month and a half. They were married Sept. 27 at city hall. Mrs. Young was 31 and the actor's fifth wife.

Last Monday they had dinner with Sy Presten, a press agent. "He was in good spirits and she was in good spirits," he said. "They were very amorous toward one another."

He said Young most recently appeared in a play Nobody Loves an Albatross for six weeks in Canada and talked of bringing it to Broadway this fall. They made a date to meet again for dinner Oct. 27.

"He was a tremendous, talented and genial human being," said Liam O'Brien, producer of a 1976 TV series that starred Young. "I knew him from the theatre, that's how far back we go."

Over the course of his career Young, who was born Byron Ellsworth Barr in St. Cloud, Minn., appeared in 55 films.

Columnist Earl Wilson said Young told him in his last full interview that he was hesitant about getting married again: "I've been single 10 years. I'm taking a long time to decide about taking the fifth."

BLOCKADE OVER IN BEIRUT

BEIRUT (AP) — Inhabitants of the battle-scarred Christian sector of the Lebanese capital were jubiliant Friday after Syrian troops withdrew from two strategic bridges and ended a 22-day blockade.

Thousands of cars began streaming over the bridges soon after the Syrian forces departed. Travelling in both directions, they brought in badly needed food, medicine and other supplies while hundreds of people who had lived through the fierce 10-day Syrian rocket and artillery onslaught grasped the opportunity to flee to safer areas.

Abductors hold chess organizer

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — The chief organizer of the 23rd Olympic Chess Tournament has been kidnapped and his abductors demanded the international meet be suspended, the missing man's wife said Friday.

Rodolfo Zalungo, 54, president of the organizing committee, was kidnapped Wednesday near the congress building in downtown Buenos Aires, said a brief communique given to reporters by Mrs. Elida Zalungo.

Government sources said it was almost certain that Zalungo was kidnapped and that the "apparent motive is to disrupt the chess tournament."

The chess tournament will be held in the River Plate sports complex from Oct. 25 to Nov. 12.

MP attack brings fine

Left-wing activist Yana Mintoff, 26-year-old daughter of Malta Prime Minister Dom Mintoff, was fined £100 ($200) in London on Friday for taking part in a manure-slinging protest in the House of Commons. Prosecutor Valerie Snook said Mintoff shouted: "Troops out of Northern Ireland," and an accomplice threw a bag of "fresh, strong-smelling manure" toward the government side of the Commons.

Six persons charged following an RCMP investigation by RCMP into land speculation in Surrey and in nearby Richmond were remanded to Nov. 10 without plea when they appeared in provincial court Friday. Former Surrey mayor Ed McKitka faces 16 charges.

An Anniston, Ala., jury has indicted television actor James Drury and eight other people on stock fraud charges in connection with a worm-raising plan, officials say. Only Drury, who starred in The Virginian TV series several years ago, and Marshall Renfroe of Centre, Ala., have been informed of the indictments, authorities said.

Viktor Korchnoi on Thursday dropped efforts to reopen the controversial world chess championship he lost to champion Anatoly Karpov of the Soviet Union in Baguio City, the Philippines. Korchnoi, a Soviet defector living in Switzerland, designated his chief second to pick up his two-fifths share of the $500,000 prize money.

It took three tries, but the aircraft finally made it through morning fog in Lahr, West Germany, on Friday, bringing Princess Anne for a one-day visit with the Canadian Forces Communications and Electronics Branch. The princess, branch colonel-in-chief, attended a luncheon, inspected a parade and met members of the branch.

The name of the game is Texas Politics and whoever spreads the most dirt is the winner. Rodney Kelly of Austin, a former employee of the Texas Senate, says his game comes with a supply of dirt, a hardwood box and a set of instructive details on wheeling and dealing in the Lone Star State.

Not our business to judge—pope

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II, a priest for 30 years in communist-ruled Poland, spoke out Friday for religious freedom and social justice but said it was "not our business" to judge the actions of governments.

In his first speech on the Vatican's place in the international arena, the pope expressed a "desire for dialogue" with the countries of the world.

The pope spoke to the Vatican diplomatic corps—repesentatives from about 100 countries.

He sent a telegram to Poland's communist leaders, meanwhile, thanking them for their congratulations on his election and telling them his "deep desire" is to see his homeland develop "spiritually and materially in peace, in the spirit of justice and respect for man." The telegram was printed on the front page of the Polish Communist party newspaper.

Vatican sources said that the 58-year-old pontiff's first visit abroad would be a trip home to Poland in May for the 900th anniversary of the death of St. Stanislaus, Poland's patron saint.

Smith agrees to talk

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Britain won acceptance from the Salisbury government of new proposals for convening a Rhodesian peace conference, then announced jointly Friday that they will seek similar approval from the Patriotic Front black guerrilla group.

Following a meeting at the U.S. state department, white Prime Minister Ian Smith and his three black allies in Rhodesia's transitional government announced their acceptance of U.S.-British proposals for five broad areas of discussion at a conference involving political factions battling for control of the African country.

U.S. officials, declining to be identified publicly, said the major obstacle now is gaining approval from the Patriotic Front, whose guerrilla bases in Zambia and Mozambique have been the targets of air strikes by Rhodesian security forces in recent days.

Our wealth in water

IT DOESN'T ALWAYS pay to be a winner. The board of the Greater Victoria Water District is probably in for some flack because it has an accumulated surplus estimated at $5.6 million and has declared a kind of dividend for its owner-user municipalities.

A public utilty, not only in the black but with some real money in the bank? It's almost unheard of. There are bound to be claims we're paying too much for water.

Commenting on the situation, Victoria Mayor Mike Young said the water district historically has avoided borrowing for capital works and has instead paid for projects out of current revenue for the most part.

That is what other utilities have failed to do, he said, adding that "servicing debts incurred for capital projects will ultimately catch up with you."

Curious comment. It implies other utilities borrow from ignorance or mismanagement rather than necessity.

The truth is that the Greater Victoria Water District, and all of us who use it, are benefitting from remarkably far-sighted planning at about the turn of the century. It was around then the decision was made not to acquire just water rights for the lakes north of Sooke but ownership of watershed lands as well. People now dead saw the Sooke lakes as the distant source of water their growing community someday would need and they also saw the need to protect its drainage system. In 1910 local taxpayers approved a bylaw which saw watershed lands bought outright for about $2 million.

The water district has been blessed with solid management since then but the sale of timber from that land over many years has certainly helped keep it in such sound financial shape.

No one has mentioned that the board's present happy position got a more recent boost through sale of water to Saanich Peninsula communities. That has put another $200,000 in the pot over the past year for water that otherwise would have literally gone down the drain.

Is a $5 or $6 million surplus too much money for the water board to have left over? A proposed diversion tunnel which would bring winter overflow water from the Leech River into the Sooke system would cost about that surplus. Paying cash for such a project would save all of us water users about $6 million. Bless those oldtimers.

Sweet nothings

HAVE YOU hugged your kid today? That's a bumper sticker you've probably seen around town. A study done at an American parenting centre indicates why it's a good idea.

Children whose parents encouraged physical contact with them daily, such as holding, hugging and cuddling, were healthier emotionally and did better at school than children whose parents were physically distant, according to this study.

Bonnie Bean, executive secretary of the Sex Information Council of Canada, says from Toronto that she thinks children whose touching needs are met at home don't become promiscuous.

That may be a little optimistic. But a hug can say things many of us can't find words for. Strange, isn't it, how many of us are both quick and efficient at criticizing but find it so hard to say flattering things to the people we care most about.

Curious case of the Canadian cane peeler

OTTAWA — News that Canada has developed a separator to peel the rind from sugar cane so that fibres which are now largely wasted can be used to make synthetic lumber and more, is as exciting as it is controversial.

Exciting because the potential impact is enormous. The value of the crop will quadruple from $35 a ton to approximately $140 — from a losing proposition to a highly profitable operation.

Controversial because the licence to manufacture the machines has been sold to Hawker Siddeley, a British-owned multinational, rather than Arvid Machine and Tool Co. of Windsor, the small Canadian independent that thought it had the inside track.

Regardless of who makes it, the machine represents the first giant leap in sugar-cane technology in decades.

For generations the cane has been crushed into one soggy mass to extract sugar. The residue, called bagasse, is then burned for fuel or just dumped.

Unwanted bagasse is not only a nuisance, but a hazardous pollutant. When it was dumped into the rivers of Costa Rica most of the fish died. On land it ferments and contaminates the soil. The Canadian machine solves the problem by opening up a whole range of useful by-products.

Wax from the outer coating can be used to waterproof containers, and the thick outer fibres for the manufacture of chip board — an acceptable substitute for imported lumber.

Sugar will still be extracted from the core leaving a pith that can be "exploded" to make good animal feed.

Or, if world sugar markets are depressed, the entire core can be used as feed once the bulky outside fibres are removed.

The Canadian International Development Agency, one of several patrons of the invention, has shown that at present prices it is more valuable for fattening cattle than for sugar.

That's good news for islanders who will have the option of producing their own juicy steaks and roasts rather than importing them and paying in foreign dollars.

Thrilled at the promise of jobs and a higher standard of living, Third World countries must be puzzled by the squabble over patents and licences.

Canada Patents and Development Ltd. (CPDL), on behalf of the Crown, offered the licence to Arvid, which now claims it was robbed.

Arvid, according to CPDL, was unable or unwilling to meet its criteria. So Hawker Siddeley got the nod and Arvid had to be content with a licence for a smaller machine which merely splits the cane to produce animal food.

But the major licence was not "given away" as some newspaper headlines suggested. Hawker paid $100,000 cash plus a seven per cent royalty and 50-cents a ton for all the cane processed. In addition, the machines must be manufactured in Canada.

Arvid, meanwhile, charges that the first Hawker effort, currently undergoing trials in Barbados, is not up to snuff. There are counter-charges that one of Arvid's related companies was involved in questionable promotional practices.

The "plot" is sufficiently weird that a full investigation is warranted to clear the air.

Under no circumstances, however, should the momentum of the project be lost. The Third World has waited too long for its share of the benefits of applied technology.

Fighter planes and 'offsets'

(The writer is a retired RCAF Air Vice Marshal)

As anyone familiar with Canada's NFA (new fighter aircraft) project must know, commercial "offsets" could have an important bearing on which of four U.S. and one European firms gets the contract for it. So, at a recent briefing for a visiting German delegation (with a major interest in the European competitor), it is reassuring that Canadian officials should emphasize selection priorities as follows: the military requirement, proposed number of aircraft for $2.34 billions, then offsets.

Reasonably enough, you may say. In fact, the government could hardly do better. Nevertheless, there remains great potential for buying the wrong aircraft. One has only to recall circumstances leading to Canada's first purchase of an aircraft carrier to appreciate the leverage of an attractive offset package on military contracts.

Back in the 50s, Defence Minister Claxton recommended purchase of the carrier Magnificent to Cabinet on several occasions, but without avail. Mr. Howe, Minister of Trade and Commerce, was the principal holdout. But when at one point Howe found himself with a large quantity of canned pork and beans on his hands, which the British offered to accept in payment for the carrier, the deal was approved without further ado!

Replacing outdated CF-100s for air defence was the first offset deal with which I had personal experience. The military requirement was clear; the USAF offered F101s from inventory at a bargain price; but Mr. Diefenbaker refused approval until a suitable kick-back changed his mood. Pork and beans didn't do the trick this time; it was permission for Canada to build 200 Lockheed F-104s, soon needed for modernizing our NATO force.

For the next aircraft purchase, the CF-5, the offset was again a license to build requirements in Canada.

Although clearly important in acquiring all three aircraft, in no case did offsets prejuduice military requirements — apart from the extra cost to build the two latter ones in Canada. However, in replacing our Argus aircraft, the threat of this happening was serious.

Lockheed and Boeing were the principal contenders for the Aurora contract. Lockheed's bid was based on an existing production line for somewhat similar U.S. Navy airframes. Boeing (a newcomer to the anti-submarine business) was able to make a more sophisticated offset bid. The feature which made it a favorite in the betting was extensive research and development in the offset package, and aimed at western Canada — the defence minister's political base. But happily, decision makers came to their senses and, by offering more aircraft for the money available, Lockheed eventually won out.

Since the Auroras couldn't be assembled in Canada without an unacceptable large premium, the Lockheed deal took a new form. It consisted ot $414 million of obligated purchases (with penalty payments for non-compliance) and "best effort" to sell 150 more aircraft of the type, with $168 million extra to Canada for parts. In sum, this was 56 per cent (40 + 16) of the $1.034 billion contract.

We're told the government has a watchdog system, supposedly to insure that it is the contractor who foots any added cost because of the offset program. But to a direct question on this point, one executive laughingly replied: "You don't honestly think as a private company we could stay in business if we played it that way, do you?"

The fact that NFA bidding was open to anyone who cared to make a pitch, and with no target percentage for offsets specified, is certainly a prime reason why the bidding has been so wild. Right from the start, Grumman and Panavia must have realized their aircraft were long shots. So why not (and particularly Panavia, backed by three EEC governments which Mr. Trudeau seems to be courting) gamble on a large, loss-leader bid to clinch a prestigious deal? Anyway, in so doing, they assuredly put pressure on the three other competitors to increase their bids, thus enhancing the chances of Canada buying an attractive offset package, but the wrong aircraft.

When questioned on this point, one defence source in the act replied: "No sweat. The military are united on the requirement as never before and offsets won't change things one iota."

Nevertheless, ultimate decision on the NFA purchase is not for the military to make. So before betting that offsets won't end up as a tail wagging a dog, I recommend reflection on two things:

First, the useful potential of the best $5 billion offset package to a political party, beleagured with a disastrous trade balance and high unemployment (a much more subtle version of the political manoeuvre which recently cost a Japanese premier his job?).

And secondly, the circumstances which, despite firm military agreement on a totally different aircraft, gave us a soon-recognized white elephant in the form of our CF-5s.

A pit mine on a giant scale pulls oil from Alberta sands

By TOM KENNEDY
Christian Science Monitor

FORT McMURRAY, Alta. — The world's second commercial oil sands extraction plant — besides having obvious benefits as a new source of energy — could serve as a playground for the proverbial giants.

Its size, equipment, and its completion cost could be included in the next edition of the Business Book of World Records.

Production of oil from the alluvial sands found underneath a waterlogged carpet of dense forests and bushland has fascinated individuals and the petroleum industry for the past 50 years.

However, it needed today's mining and materials handling technology, capable of "moving mountains," to make large-scale oil sands extraction a reality for Alberta. Hence the need for the oversize hardware, the $2.4 billion to pay for it and the superlatives when discussing the project.

The 129,000-barrel-a-day production by Syncrude Canada, Ltd., a consortium of three private petroleum companies and three Canadian governments, is coming from the largest open pit mine in the world.

The bituminous sand is scooped up by three enormous draglines that weigh 6,700 tons each and are powered by 20,000-hp. diesel-electric engines.

They cost $30 milliom each, and there was no discount on the multiple orders for the cathedral-size machinery.

The special alloy bucket that dangles from a boom longer than a football field could accommodate a suburban double garage with room to spare around its eight-inch-thick walls.

About 93 million tons of oil sands will be scooped up annually and heaped onto six-foot-wide conveyor belts to be transported to the extraction plant.

About two tons of raw bitumen and tailings have to be moved for every barrel of synthetic oil produced. This makes the Syncrude pit — with daily volume of 250,000 tons of solid matter — the largest mining operation in the world.

Eventually, some 17 miles of the high-speed conveyor belt system, costing $200 a foot for the belt alone, will crisscross the 11 square miles of the lease areas. The "cuts" or trenches, will be 150 feet deep and about 450 feet wide at the top, running for miles until the immediate deposits have been exhausted.

The extraction plant and the adjacent refinery have some 423 miles of steel pipe of various diameters. The assortment of pipes was put in place to funnel in high-pressure steam, channel semi-processed crude to become the honey-colored finished product, and circulate the large amounts of water used in many stages of the upgrading process.

Almost 3,000 miles of electric wires and enough concrete to build a dozen stadiums, each with a capacity of some 40,000 spectators, went into the Syncrude plant. Its own utility plant generates enough electricity to supply all the needs of a city of 300,000 people.

At the peak of construction, an army of 7,000 labored to put it all together. It will require a permanent staff of about 4,000 workers to keep the plant functioning.

The initial experiments by Syncrude, originally owned by Imperial Oil, Ltd., the Canadian subsidiary of Exxon Corp.; Gulf Oil Canada, Ltd.; Canada Cities Service, Ltd.; and Atlantic Richfield Canada, Ltd., began more than 20 years ago.

Although perhaps no more than a drop in the world's oil supply, the Syncrude production will become extremely important for Canada once full volume output has been achieved. The plant's output will equal 10 per cent of Canada's conventional oil flow.

One judge and her trials

By WILLIAM SCOBIE
The London Observer

SAN FRANCISCO — An unprecedented campaign to remove California's chief justice from office moved into top gear this month. Powerful business interests are spending more than $1 million in an effort to unseat Justice Rose Bird, 41, the first woman ever to serve on the state's supreme court.

The campaign is as intense as it is intemperate. Miss Bird's opponents are denouncing her, with heavy reliance on television commercials, as incompetent, biased, soft on crime, even "emotionally unstable" — in short, a leftist threat to the American way of life.

Allies of the chief justice respond that what chiefly riles her right-wing assailants is that she is a woman, filling what has been a men-only position for 130 years of Californian history.

Controversy has swirled around Rose Bird since her appointment 18 months ago by her friend, Governor Jerry Brown.

Although she had wide legal experience, including eight years as a public defender, she had never sat on the bench. Veteran judges and court administrators were outraged. Some resigned in anger.

Republican critics were quick to make political hay with her allegedly "liberal" rulings on mandatory busing, criminals' rights and such-like. Her administrative abilities were attacked. Miss Bird could not even order the conference table in the Supreme Court's San Francisco rooms moved a few feet without upsetting colleagues: two justices refused to work until the table was restored to its original spot.

With the start of the political hunting season in California last month, two separate groups were formed to persuade the electorate that Bird — whose appointment must be confirmed by voters November 7 — was not worthy of her office. Polls indicate that the Bird-hunters have Californians both divided and confused.

Five weeks ago, the chief justice had a clear margin of popular approval. Today, only one-third would retain her, one-third would depose her and one-third of voters "don't know".

Since she refuses to campaign on her own behalf and has returned all donations sent to her, the campaign is somewhat one-sided. Much of the money raised by her opponents comes from agribusiness interests.

While serving earlier as agricultural secretary in the Brown administration, she wrote a new farm law which helped unionize state farm workers. Big growers in the state's number one industry did not forget that.

One group against her is a "law and order committee" led by state Senator H. L. Richardson, spokesman for the gun lobby and a prime defender of the death penalty (which Bird opposes). The organization is approved by the state Republican Party. And so apparently is its TV commercials. One spot depicts a violent, simulated rape, while a narrator accuses Bird of "putting (convicted) rapists back on the streets". The chief justice's offence was to concur in a Supreme Court opinion that the legislature had not defined rape as "great bodily injury", a term which would automatically increase a jail sentence.

The commercial failed to mention that Bird, after a harangue against rapists, had also urged the legislature to amend the statute.

Democratic Party leaders now see the challenge to Bird shaping up as a referendum on the accountability of the judiciary to public opinion and a step towards the "politicizing" of one of the country's most independent and progressive supreme courts.

Canada warned about situation that now exists

Recently we have listened to the economists and pundits telling us the reason for the weakness of the Canadian dollar, namely we are buying more than we are selling. This year's deficit is forecast to be well over $10 billion. Nearly one half of this deficit is in the payments of interest and dividends to foreign countries. It is hard to understand how Canada got in such a mess, especially when we were warned about this very situation.

In October 1975, Walter Gordon, former Liberal finance minister published a book titled Storm Signals. He was worried about the extent of foreign control and ownership in Canada and in the book he puts forward a ten-year plan whereby we could regain the control of our economy. He stated all the ramifications necessary to acomplish this. In 1970 a group of prominent Canadians formed The Committee for an Independent Canada. This group included Walter Gordon, several well known economists, Jack McClelland and Mel Hurtig, publishers, Peter Newman, editor, Flora MacDonald, candidate for the Conservation leadership, Claude Ryan and many others.

They petitioned Trudeau (170,000 signatures) but nothing came of it.

In 1976, Eric Kierans, former president of the Montreal Stock Exchange and Liberal cabinet minister, made a speech at Memorial University, St. John's, titled Big corporations must be cut to fit our needs. In it he stated that 83 corporations control 46 per cent of business in Canada.

In a television documentary on the recent Nicaraguan civil war, The Fifth Estate showed how a ruthless dictator rules by the cruel use of tanks, guns and airplanes. It showed us a gold mine, owned by a large Canadian mining company and the terrible conditions under which the miners worked. Many of our industries have moved to where the wages are very low and in some cases harsh dictatorships. At Sparwood in the East Kootenays there is a coal mine with a yearly potential of 8 million tons. We built a railway line across the Delta to Tsawwassen and built a coal docking facility at Roberts Bank.

We get $2.50 a ton and I bet it is not a Canadian ship that carries the coal.

During the Second World War we built airplanes, big and little ships and dozens of other manufactured goods and furthermore manned these ships and airplanes.

We have 10 provincial governments and the federal Parliament in Ottawa, but the large corporations control the economy.

Statement termed bunkum

A short time ago I suggested that Charles Barber, MLA, instead of contacting all the provincial premiers concerning British pensioners which is a federal matter, would have been better advised to channel his request through the trades unions to their counterparts in Britain to pressure the present British government of socialist persuasion, to take action.

W. Stringer replies and I quote, "The letters from Mr. Barber have found their place in the files of British parliamentarians and the Trades Union Action Committee of British Pensioners organization are fully informed and committed to assist."

If this is a fact, my first reaction is W. Stringer has been coached by Mr. Barber or has access to his files.

Secondly, the channels of communication to effect the most benefit and prestige to the problem should in my opinion have been through his provincial leader Barrett and federal leader Broadbent.

Has he no faith in those two gentlemen or is it a personal reason keeping himself as the central figure?

Mr. Stringer further states: "Finally let me inform Mr. Burns that social services do not dole out welfare to British pensioners in Canada. They are not entitled and do not receive assistance."

This statement is pure political bunkum absolutely erroneous and must be distressing to anyone who places reliance on such gratuitous advice.

I would say to any one in need that they discuss their problem with the trained social workers who have no political axe to grind, and keep away from the political haymakers.

Does Mr. Barber or W. Stringer wish to refute this statement?

Surely no one would suggest that British pensioners receive preferential treatment in excess of that granted to recognized Canadian citizens.

I am also accused by W. Stringer of making this matter a political football; this is at variance with Mr. Barber's action in which he seems to be the self appointed star in the game of kicking the ball around.

Did money for ships come from surplus?

On Oct. 12 Mr. Bennett announced that B.C. is going to start on a $60 million ship building boom, the biggest in B.C.'s history.

One can now ask, where did the money for such a venture come from;

- From the surplus they obtained when they increased taxes, and in doing so broke their election promise not to increase or;
- From the $79.8 million that they recorded as receiving from the sale of the three new vessels that were built underneath the NDP administration. The $79.8 million is seen recorded in Mr. Wolfe's financial reports, $31.4 million April to Sept. 77, 48.4 million April to Dec. 77. Total $79.8 million.

Why does Mr. Bennett not let the ferry corporation announce that they are going to build these ferries, for when Mr. Bennett created the corporation through legislation, which was to remove it from the sphere of political influence, he gave it a guaranteed borrowing capacity of $250 million. Why not let the corporation arrange financing (as he did when he sold their previous ferries, so we could buy then back again), to build the ferries.

Perhaps Mr. Bennett is looking for a way to use up some of the surplus and create some jobs, for awhile anyway, and when he calls his election he can say, look at the good things I've done. (This is like giving candy to a child so he does what you want him to, come election time, of what is more commonly referred to in some circles, as a bribe. After he gets what he wants, he will take it away until the next time he wants something.)

Letter is typical of frustration foresters suffer

Forester Bruce Devitt is leading with his chin when he attacks the conservationists with the frenzy expressed in his letter of Sept. 30 under the title of Mighty Impact. His letter would hardly be worth answering were it not typical of the frustration most foresters are experiencing, caught up as they are between the economic pressures put forward by industry and the concern for better forestry as viewed by conservation groups.

When Devitt states: "Sure logging is a brutal harvest procedure," and defends this on the basis of tree size and the need to maintain employment, he is presenting industry's argument but without using his forestry knowledge to question the illusion this argument creates. In his frenzy to shoot down the concern of conservationists he is overlooking the fact that most of our big timber is gone and that better logging and forest management would create more jobs, not less.

Besides, he substantiates this latter fact further on when he points out that make-work programs and unemployment relief expenditures are over $9 billion annually yet very little of this is spent on "tending the crop that helps support the country."

The above two paragraphs spell out in a nutshell what is wrong with our forest policy. On the one hand, some foresters and the minister accept without too much question that the industry can't help logging wastefully and destructively, and on the other hand they completely disregard the employment potential of better logging methods and forestry management.

Thus it is evident that the frustration that brought on Devitt's explosive letter is in reality very akin to that which frustrates the public, which the conservation groups represent. Devitt knows that if the minister and his forest service advisors clearly defined the place, and values, of logging, of silviculture, and of environment protection, in an over-all forestry management scheme that he too would come out on the side of conservation. If the company he works for were "induced," as a measure of labor-intensifying employment scheme, to develop more forestry oriented logging methods, his company could readily adapt many European harvesting techniques. Devitt also knows that this would lead to less reliance on much uneconomic planting of poor forest sites and a greater concern for the management, or as Devitt says, "tending the crop that helps support the country."

The common enemy is a minister and forest service closed in on themselves and unwilling to accept the challenge of the times.

Home birth is safe, wonderful experience

The response to my letter defending a mother's right to the kind of birth she chooses, and arguing for the merits of home birth, has raised several issues which deserve discussion.

First, I must apologize for my error in claiming that home birth is illegal in Victoria. I was told this when I asked several Victoria doctors to attend me at a home birth. I found, however, that licensed midwives are banned from practice, that no doctor will attend at, or after, a home birth, that no medical facilities will be available in the home, and in the event of any mishap (e.g. stillbirth, which could happen anywhere) the mother is criminally liable to prosecution for murder. In spite of this, home birth in Victoria is safe, and, with a sensitive and experienced lay-midwife, I found it a wonderful experience.

It does seem as though the medical profession conspires to make home birth as dangerous as possible, and Mr. Boulton's remark that women freely choose hospital birth rings a little false. That women do so because hospital birth is safer shows a serious lack of information. The statistics for 1975, the most recent figures I have available, show the infant mortality rate for Canada as 1.7 per hundred births, while for Holland, where 60 per cent of births occur at home, and the rest in maternity centres, the rate is 1.1 per hundred births. The rate is better for places with a home birth tradition; and this is reflected in the statistics for home birth in Victoria: 0.6 per hundred births.

Regarding the laboring mother as a "patient," as Mr. Boulton does, and insisting she belongs in a hospital, appears to license the use of unnecessary, harmful and lucrative medical intervention. How else are we to account for the wide discrepancy in the following figures?

In Canada, 85 per cent of mothers receive obstetrical medication, in Holland, 5 per cent. In Canada, 80 per cent of mothers have episiotomies, in Holland, 20 per cent. In Canada 8 per cent undergo Caesarian section, in Holland, 2 per cent. To take a case in point, a local doctor tells me that he recommends episiotomy in all first deliveries (and this usually means tearing or further episiotomies in future deliveries), but midwives learn a technique of massage to avoid this painful procedure.

Medication given to the mother in labor is dangerous to the child causing anoxia (lack of oxygen) and its related brain damage. We must also recognize the further danger to the child of the use of forceps (60 per cent in Canada, 5 per cent in Holland) and the artificial induction of labor (20 per cent in Canada, 5 per cent in Holland).

We should also be aware that the use of medication often necessitates both the use of forceps and the practice of episiotomy. The practices are interrelated. Thus, a high percentage of Canadian babies arrive under the influence of drugs, seriously short of the oxygen needed to maintain brain tissue, to have the cord cut while they are still dependent on it, to have their eyes stung by silver nitrate even if their mother has carefully avoided gonorrhea, and to be exposed to life in a place with more airborne antibiotic-resistant bacteria than any other on earth. Is it any wonder they lose weight and must be carefully monitored? But is it logical to argue that, therefore, they need to be in hospital? Should we embrace the cause as a cure?

Sharing Mr. Boulton's concern with family well-being, we must also recognize the dangers which threaten it from hospital birth. California studies show that mothers who abuse and/or reject their children, were separated from them during the first 48 hours of birth.

Hospitals, in encouraging mothers to relinquish their infants to the nursery, interfere with an important early "bonding" process, making mothers feel replaceable; that others can better care for her child than she herself. It is also noted that sibling rivalry disappears where brothers and sisters can see the new baby being born. They can appreciate why the mother loves and cares for the newborn, and also why she loves and cares for them. I am sure that studies will show that where the father shares the birth experience in his own home with his family, it enhances his relationship with his wife and his child, and increases his respect for women and for life.

If women carefully examine the evidence on home birth and on hospital procedures, and if the law would allow trained midwives, with medical facilities available on call, to practice in the home, then I feel sure that more women who face a normal delivery, would choose home birth because it is in every way better.

Guild body protests ad

On behalf of the Victoria Newspaper Guild's human rights committee, I would like to express our disappointment with advertisements published in the Oct. 13 and 15 Daily Colonist.

The ads, "How to bring your son's world a little closer to your own," were placed by the circulation department of Victoria Press, and were the subject of complaints by the reading public. We believe these complaints were justified. The provincial human rights branch spoke for many of the complainants when it said the ads exploited the relationship between children and parents, reduced this relationship to economics, and was blatantly discriminatory to women.

We hope the circulation and advertising departments consider these complaints and consider also that such ads are harmful and can only reduce Victoria Press' reputation for fairness in the community.

Can't win

My wife and I read, with both amusement and shock, of the rumpus raised by your recent advertisement for the recruitment of carrier boys.

We agreed that, had we a daughter (we have three sons and four granddaughters), we would not allow her out in the streets at 4 or 5 o'clock in the morning.

We suggest that, to keep those who would happy, you alter the gender and re-run your advertisement.

If you do this, however, be prepared for a barrage of protest from those who share my wife's and my views.

Hiring married women

Without wishing to give offence to anyone I should like to suggest that one of the causes of unemployment in this country (and other countries with a similar problem) is the hiring of married women whose husbands are on full pay and earning good salaries.

Admittedly, employers find such women to be reliable and trustworthy, but there are plenty of unemployed people of both sexes who could be doing such work, and also saving the country a great deal of expense in having to pay out unemployment benefits and welfare.

Socreds urge public role in labor disputes

Resolution aims to ease confrontation

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial government should place greater emphasis on the protection of the public interest in labor disputes, delegates at the Social Credit party's annual convention decided Friday.

In one of several resolutions approved, delegates voted for more government involvement in contract disputes.

The resolution also calls on the government "to consider alternatives to the present process of confrontation used in conducting employee-employer relations."

Urging support, one delegate said that there should be government-supervised secret balloting in every strike vote conducted in B.C.

MLA George Mussallem (SC—Dewdney) objected to the resolution, however, saying it means a move to totalitarianism.

The government should only move when the public interest is affected," he said, "and we have legislation for that."

Delegates also approved a resolution telling the government to give high priority to maintaining environmental quality in B.C., and urging that funds be set aside "to assure the co-ordinated and intelligent management of resources and natural wealth."

An additional section of the resource-ecology resolution which called on the government to kill off starlings which are threatening the grape and fruit industries in the southern Okanagan Valley, was defeated.

Delegates also decided that the government should consider establishing a taxation ceiling "that may not be exceeded without reference to the electorate."

Preamble to the resolution said excessive taxation "is a burden on the productivity on our human, natural and financial resources," and pointed to the effects of initiative legislation in the United States as a means of protesting tax increases.

Unanimous approval was given to a resolution to set up a youth auxiliary of the party, specifically for persons aged 16 through 26.

Delegates also approved calling on the national and provincial governments "to work diligently together to find equitable solutions" to the problems of Confederation "with the objective that Canada remain a united nation from sea to sea with the queen as head of state."

In another two-part resolution, delegates commended "the government's efforts to emphasize (through the education ministry) the importance of basic fundamental skills," and urged that "the burden of school taxes" be alleviated by substantially increasing the homeowners' grant, now set at $280 a year and $480 a year for those over 65.

Discussion on other resolutions, including a right-to-work resolution, was to continue today.

A BCR strike 'not expected'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Labor Minister Allan Williams said Friday he did not expect a strike by B.C. Railway workers today unless it was an illegal one.

However, both the unions and the government-owned railway were poised for a walkout.

The company began preparing for a strike by placing an embargo on the shipment of perishable goods to prevent the goods sitting in rail cars from spoiling if the 3,000 members of the seven unions walked out, said railway spokesman Hugh Armstrong.

Williams said that although the Council of Railway Unions had given strike notice that would be effective at noon today, mediator Fred Geddes had not withdrawn from the contract dispute.

Williams said the unions had asked Geddes to report out of the dispute. However, that would not officially take place until the minister had seen the report and released it to both parties.

He said he had not yet seen the report.

Stand toughening on teachers' pay

VANCOUVER (CP) — School districts will get tougher about teachers' pay increases, Education Minister Pat McGeer said Friday.

McGeer made the statement in an interview after speaking to a seminar on education at the Social Credit party annual convention.

McGeer earlier told the seminar that five-year budget forecasts, required earlier this year of all school districts by the education ministry, will significantly slow down the large annual budget increases of the past few years.

McGeer said in the interview that the school districts have said they hope to save money by cutting back salary increases for teachers and other employees, reducing the number of administrative personnel and shelving of plans to increase the number of the teachers in view of declining enrolments.

"All of this adds up to good news for the taxpayers," McGeer said.

Health Minister Robert McClelland, in reviewing his ministry's programs, took a tough line on the heroin addiction treatment program which goes into effect April 1.

McGeer
...'good for taxpayers'

Noting there had been considerable opposition to the program, particularly from persons concerned about alleged infringements of civil liberties, McClelland told the seminar: "I make no apologies for making the protection of society as high a priority as the rights of narcotics users."

In his opinion, a person who must through illegal means raise up to $1,000 for his habit "be continually haunted by fear of his apprehension by police or of being 'ripped off' by those the addict sees as his friends does not possess much in the way of civil liberties."

"What kind of civil liberties do you have when your life is pinned to the end of a dirty needle?" McClelland said. "We can only win (the war against drugs) if we have the guts to try."

Commenting on health, he said the big four killers at present are diseases that the individual can do much on his own to cure—heart attacks, strokes, lung cancer, and motor vehicle accidents.

McClelland said B.C. had the highest motor vehicle accident rate in Canada, with 700 persons killed and 25,000 injured a year, which takes up the equivalent of a 400-bed hospital every year.

82,618 SOCREDS

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Social Credit party has 82,618 members in B.C., Premier Bennett said Friday.

Bennett read the figure while presenting membership drive awards during an afternoon session at the party's annual convention.

The party's total revenue decreased to $143,000 from $156,000.

Delegates were told there was no excess of revenue over expenditure.

Current party assets are valued at $33,000 compared with $30,000 last year, while value of life memberships increased to $68,000 from $54,000.

Vancouver must wait

The floating drydock proposed for Vancouver in a recent federal government announcement will not be so large as the one delivered earlier this month to Portland, Ore. from Japan.

E.J. Jones, vice-president of operations for the Burrard, Yarrows group said in an interview he hopes the new floating drydock will be built at a west coast shipyard, not a foreign one.

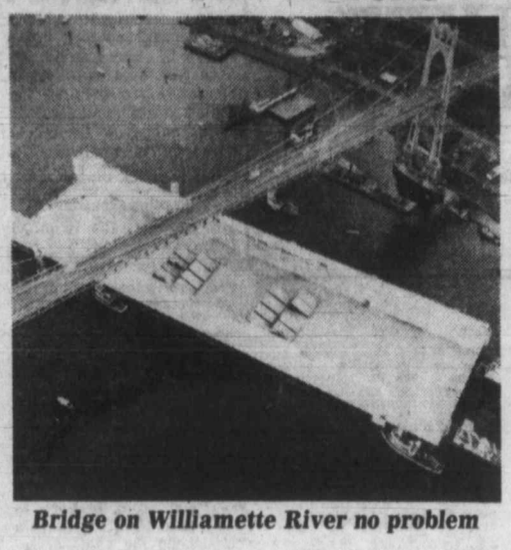
He pointed out it would be impractical for the dock to be built in an eastern yard because it would be too wide a structure to go through the Panama Canal, which is only 130 feet wide.

Jones also said a new floating dock at Vancouver which would handle ships 725 feet long by 150 feet in width would have little effect on the business currently done at Esquimalt's federal graving dock, by Yarrows Ltd.

"That dock is about 1,100 feet long and 125 feet wide and can mainly deal with longer ships and specially-designed vessels such as the roll-on roll-off ships," he said.

The Portland drydock was built in less than 11 months by Ishikawajkima-Harima Heavy Industries at Kure, Japan at a cost of $17 million.

The dock was delivered to the Columbia River from Kure, by a single tug of Tokyo Marine Services after a 5,200-mile tow thought to be the biggest dead tow ever to cross the Pacific.



Bridge on Williamette River no problem

The Portland dock is capable of handling ships as large as 275,000-tons.

Several B.C. martime officials were appointed members of the American Bureau of Shipping's Canadian committee during the committee's inaugural meeting last week in Toronto.

Robert Young, chairman of the board of ABS, said the committee was formed to enable ABS to maintain closer contact with management officials in Canada's maritime industry.

The American Bureau of Shipping is an international classification society that establishes standards, called Rules, for the design, construction, and periodic survey of merchant vessels and other marine structures.

Among those named to the committee were: James Hudson, president, Burrard Dry Dock Co, North Vancouver; T.A. McLaren, president, Allied Shipbuilders Ltd., North Vancouver; James Byrn, president, Genstar Marine Ltd., North Vancouver; Norman Cosulich, vice-president, Rivtow Straits Ltd., Vancouver; Allen Fowlis, president, Seaspan International Ltd., North Vancouver.

John Gratwick, president and chief executive officer of CN Marine, told the Society of Naval Architechs and Marine Engineers at a recent meeting in Montreal that Canadian development and experimentation in the field of marine technology has been sporadic and inconsistent.

"There has been too much time elapse and too little sense of direction govern the steps forward we have been able to take," said Gratwick. That should not be the case in the future, he added.

He said CN Marine has done a great deal to encourage the use in Canada of modern marine technology on a planned basis and has been willing to share experience and information on common problems and solutions.

He listed development of special paints for icebreakers and use of onboard monitoring computers as examples of use of marine technology.

He noted that CN Marine is five years old, but warned that it should not be looked upon as the "third coming of Canada's merchant marine."

"No one company is even going to determine that its a worthwhile objective, let alone an affordable one," he said.

The British port of Liverpool is expanding the timber terminal at its Royal Seaforth Dock complex to meet growing trade, particularly from eastern Canada. Plans call for another 200 metres of water space and a backup area for ships not requiring quayside cranes.

Throughput at the terminal last year was 191,000 metric tons. This year it is expected to be about 300,000 tons, according to British government forecasts.

MARKET REPORT

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market capped off a week of record-setting losses Friday with another broad decline in heavy trading.

Analysts said bad news in the latest statistics on the United States money supply helped aggravate the recent flareup of concern over inflation and rising interest rates.

Brokers said Friday the slide in stock prices was feeding on itself by touching off margin calls.

Rules covering trading on margin—that is, using money borrowed from brokers to buy stocks—require margin calls when the value of securities used as collateral on those loans declines beyond a certain point.

If a trader cannot or does not wish to put up additional collateral, then his broker must sell enough of his stock to bring his account within requirements again.

At last count, analysts noted, the number of margin accounts and the total of margin debt outstanding were at record levels.

Among Canadian issues on the NYSE, Seagram dropped one point to close at $25⅜. Hiram Walker lost one to $30¾.

NOTICE

THE CORPORATION OF THE CITY OF VICTORIA

HERITAGE DESIGNATION BYLAW

The City of Victoria intends to designate the buildings on the lands described as Lots 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5, Plan 220 (South Park School, 508 Douglas Street) as a municipal heritage site pursuant to Section II of the Heritage Conservation Act by finally adopting "Heritage Designation Bylaw (No. 132)" at the regular Council meeting to be held at City Hall on THURSDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1978 at 7:30 p.m.

The owner and occupier of the said land may object to the heritage designation by delivering written notice of the grounds of such objection to the office of the Municipal Manager not later than 24 hours before the Council meeting. If such notice has been filed, the owner and the occupier may in addition appear in person or by counsel or agent before the said Council meeting to elaborate on the grounds of objection contained in the written notice.

Colin F. G. Crisp, Assistant Municipal Manager. City Hall, Victoria.

Massey-Ferguson to be sold?

Black boys have 'em buzzing

By CANADIAN PRESS

The buzz phrase in Canadian financial circles in the last week was "what will the Blacks do next?"

Eyebrows shot up when Conrad Black and his brother Montegu engineered a bold deal to buy another major piece of Argus Corp. from their chief rival, Montreal-based Power Corp., headed by industrialist Paul Desmarais.

Power Corp. agreed to sell its shares in Argus for $80 million in cash and notes. The buyer was Ravelston Corp. Ltd., the vehicle the Blacks used to take control of Argus in a coup last spring.

With the deal, Ravelston will own about 88 per cent of Argus common shares and 60 per cent of its C preferred shares.

Speculation is that Power sold out to get cash to help pay for the $70 million it spent three years ago in an aborted attempt to wrest control of Argus, based in Toronto.

Montegu Black is president and director of Ravelston which he and his brother control. Conrad Black is president and chairman of the executive committee of Argus.

With their bitter rival, Power Corp., out of the way, the question now is what more do the Blacks have in mind for Argus, the giant holding company whose interests include mining, broadcasting, and manufacturing.

One of their major concerns is Massey-Ferguson Ltd., the multinational farm machinery manufacturer which lost $145 million in the last nine months. Analysts believe the Blacks won't want to sell Massey-Ferguson at this time because it would not bring a high enough price.

Another possibility being raised is that Argus will sell its 17 per cent interest in Domtar Ltd. A potential buyer of Domtar is Consolidated-Bathurst Ltd., the forest products subsidiary of Power Corp.

Argus apparently is in need of cash to finance a proposal to increase its stake in Hollinger Mines Ltd. Under the deal, Argus would increase its interest in Hollinger to about 26 per cent from 24 per cent with the right of first refusal to buy another 14 per cent.

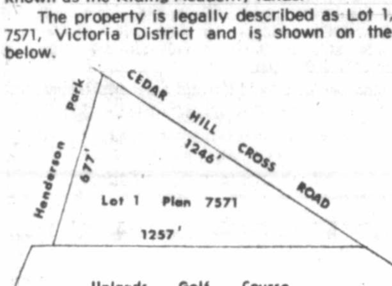
THE CORPORATION OF THE DISTRICT OF OAK BAY

FOR SALE

The Corporation of the District of Oak Bay invites offers to purchase the following property:

9.3 acres located on Cedar Hill Cross Road, lying adjacent to and north of Uplands Golf Course and known as the Riding Academy lands.

The property is legally described as Lot 1, Plan 7571, Victoria District and is shown on the plan below.



A detailed scheme for the phased development of 64 luxury townhouse units upon the property has been prepared and the purchaser of the property will be required to develop the property in accordance with this scheme.

Council reserves the right to review modified proposals similar in nature to the plans prepared.

A booklet containing plans and specifications for the proposed scheme of development, a description of development controls and the terms of sale is available at the Oak Bay Municipal Hall, 2167 Oak Bay Avenue, Victoria, B.C., V8R 1G2, and at the office of Vern Delgatty, Architect, 100-4400 Dominion Street, Burnaby, B.C., V5G 4G3.

A $100 deposit is required for each booklet.

Offers are to be submitted by November 20, 1978 at 4:00 p.m., to the Oak Bay Municipal Hall, 2167 Oak Bay Avenue, Victoria, B.C., V8R 1G2.

This is not a call for tenders and no offer will, necessarily, be accepted.

Western —after flip

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Two men who make six-figure salaries and run multimillion-dollar businesses flipped a coin Thursday to decide a matter of billing.

The result: The seventh-largest U.S. airline will be called Western Continental.

The coin flippers were Western Airlines Chairman Art Kelly and Continental Airlines Chairman Robert Six, who — if they get all the required government approvals — are merging their airlines.

The question was whether to call it Western Continental or Continental Western Airlines.

"Since this is a consolidation of the two companies rather than a take-over by either, we wanted to make certain that the new name would be fair to both." Kelly and Six said.

While employees of both airlines watched, Airport Manager Clifton Moore flipped a $20 gold piece from 1903, the year of the Wright Brothers' historic flight.

Kelly called "heads," winning the right to place Western first in the new name.

Before they can merge, the proposal must be approved by the Civil Aeronautics Board, the president and the stockholders of the two lines.

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. dollar hit a new low against the West German mark Friday and continued to slide against most other currencies abroad and in New York while gold prices climbed.

In Montreal the Canadian dollar rallied on international money markets Friday and closed at 84.42 cents against its American counterpart, up nearly an eighth of a cent from Thursday's close of 84.30 cents.

Trading in the currency was light as traders for Canada's chartered banks held an annual closed-door meeting in Toronto to discuss the dollar's plight.

In Frankfurt, the U.S. dollar fell to a record low of 1.8110 marks, down from 1.8390 at Thursday's close. In later New York trading, the dollar finished at 1.8077 marks, down from 1.8322.

In Zurich, gold bullion closed at $228.125 U.S. ($265 Canadian) a troy ounce, up from $226.125 at the previous close. In London, Europe's other major bullion market, the price was $228.00 compared to $226.50.

The all-time closing high for gold was $229.125, set Wednesday in Zurich.

AMC picks new boss

DETROIT (AP) — American Motors Corp. has hired a new president and promoted president Gerald Meyers to chairman, the auto-maker announced Friday.

The new chairman is Gerald Meyers, 49, who succeeds Roy Chapin, chairman for 11 years. Chapin announced last month he was leaving active participation in AMC management but he remains a part-time consultant.

W. Paul Tippett, 45, executive vice-president of the Singer Co., was elected to the No. 2 spot and named chief operating officer by the AMC board.

Experts in getaways renew acquaintance

OTTAWA (CP)—Ray Labrosse, a Canadian intelligence agent, depended on luck and people like Pierre Moreau to keep him a step ahead of the German Gestapo in France in 1943.

For 15-year-old Moreau, it was an exciting time as he ran dangerous messages for Labrosse and others operating an escape network for Allied airmen in Brittany.

Moreau and his wife and 10 other French helpers of escaped Canadian airmen were in Ottawa this week to exchange memories with Labrosse and members of the Canadian section of the Royal Escaping Society.

The ex-airmen in the escaping society keep close contact with their wartime helpers, bringing them over frequently for visits and giving them aid when they need it.

Moreau and his mother started smuggling downed Allied airmen out of France in 1942, several months before Labrosse was dropped into Brittany to take charge of an escape network near St. Quay-Portrieux, the Moreaus' home village.

Labrosse, now a bushy-haired, 58-year-old veterans' pensions commissioner, said, "Pierre's mother took me in. I was doing some radio transmissions from their house."

The Moreaus hid 20 airmen in their house in the early months of 1943 before the Gestapo discovered what was going on.

"We were warned. We knew in time," Moreau said, recalling how the Germans came in one door of their house while the Moreaus and some airmen left by another.

Labrosse had left weeks earlier. The Moreaus wandered homeless for the rest of the war, and Pierre Moreau was wounded with the French Resistance.

Moreau recalled that he was not afraid at the time. "I was young and I had great confidence in my chief," he said, looking at Labrosse. "It didn't bother me."

THE ORGANIZATION

VICTORIA GENERAL HOSPITAL:

A 400 bed Acute Care hospital is currently embarked on a $44 million programme for complete replacement of existing facilities. The hospital employs over 1,200 people and has an annual operating budget exceeding $20 million.

THE POSITION

THE DIRECTOR OF FINANCE:

Will be responsible to the Chief Executive Officer for management of the financial affairs of the hospital. This includes the major functions of budgeting (operating, capital and cash flow), financial analysis, investments and the general supervision through the Chief Accountant of the financial transactions of the hospital. The Director of Finance will be one of a small group of senior advisers to the Executive Director.

THE APPLICANT

A CHARTERED ACCOUNTANT:

With a number of years of progressively responsible accounting and management experience. Emphasis on cost accounting, governmental regulations and financial analysis will highlight the successful applicant's career. Equivalent qualifications and experience such as R.I.A. or C.G.A. will be seriously considered. This position will be of interest to Finance Executives currently earning in excess of $25,000 p.a.

Interested parties should forward a detailed resume to:

The Executive Director,
841 Fairfield Road,
VICTORIA, B.C. V8V 3B6.

ACCOUNTING ASSISTANT

B.C. Tel has an immediate requirement for an Accounting Assistant, responsible for: supervising the activities of employees engaged in the preparation and transmission of payroll data, time reporting, payment of suppliers, construction cost control, billing special accounts and cash control.

The successful candidate will be a self starter, with proven supervisor experience — able to provide meaningful recommendations for improving existing procedures and establishing day to day assignment of job priorities to ensure reporting schedules are met. The candidates will possess a recognized professional accounting designation coupled with practical experience in payroll, accounts payable, time reporting, budget controls and minicomputer systems.

This vacancy exists in Victoria; however, the successful candidate must be willing to relocate within the Province of B.C. in the future.

This position offers an excellent career opportunity and an attractive compensation package that includes a full range of employee benefits.

Please forward your resume outlining experience, qualifications and salary expectations in confidence to:

Mr. G. M. Chad,
Employment Supervisor,
B.C. Telephone Company,
1321 Blanshard Street,

Child-unit leaving quarters in EMI?

The child and family psychiatric unit on the sixth floor of the Eric Martin Institute may be moved to the Queen Alexandra Hospital.

The regional hospital and health planning commission decided Wednesday night to send that suggestion from Dr. Philip Ney, director of the child and family psychiatric unit, to the Queen Alexandra Hospital for study.

A report from the commission's pediatric sub-committee said the sixth-floor location is a serious drawback for a children's psychiatric unit. The outdoor play area is all concrete, with some restrictions on the children's play to prevent injury.

Furthermore, the location of the unit at EMI carries with it a certain stigma in the eyes of the children and parents, who do not want to be lumped in with "crazy people," even though the hospital has gone to great lengths to keep the children separate from adult patients on other floors, the sub-committee said.

The 10 beds in the unit are probably inadequate, the sub-committee said. There are only 18 such beds in the province, with the other eight in Vancouver, and the Victoria unit has a waiting list which varies between one and six months. It has almost never been at less than 100 per cent occupancy since it was opened.

The distance between EMI and the Royal Jubilee pediatrics ward also makes co-ordination of pediatric and child psychiatry services difficult, the report says.

Options for relocating the facility are the construction of cottages on the Royal Jubilee grounds, an arrangement originally planned, but never implemented, at EMI. But finding space on the grounds of Royal Jubilee would be difficult, particularly since the hospital is in the midst of planning its own building program. The cottages and play area would cost about $600,000.

Furthermore, the region's pediatrics services will eventually be concentrated at the new Victoria General hospital planned for Helmcken Road, making the distance between the child psychiatry unit and pediatrics services even greater.

The Queen Alexandra Hospital is an attractive facility at ground level, close to the University and the Pearkes Clinic. But renovations or new construction would be required and could cost up to $1 million for a 20-bed unit.

$750 FINE ON POT

Eric R. Quissy, 28, was fined $750 in Victoria county court Friday when he pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana at Colwood Sept. 25, 1977.

Police said they found on Quissy, in his car or at his home, eight plastic packages of marijuana, sets of scales, hash pipes, plastic bags, marijuana calendars and printed handouts on the use of marijuana and peyote.

'Ministers cheap'

Canadian Press

Opposition leader Dave Barrett lambasted the British Columbia government Friday for what he said was its failure to supply funding for handicapped students in Vancouver.

Barrett said the Social Credit government should be ashamed because hundreds of B.C. handicapped students are struggling through courses without adequate textbooks and equipment.

He said the Social Credit party is holding its annual convention in a high-class hotel this weekend, "paying for delegates to come to their convention while those cheap ministers are cutting off handicapped children from receiving the kind of assistance they need to get a decent education to avoid welfare.

"That is a dramatic illustration of their priorities—pay for their delegates, out of party funds, to come down to maintain a party that would cut off handicapped children from getting a proper education."

Barrett was commenting on remarks made by Ken Haycock, an official with the Vancouver school district, who said more than 1,000 children in Vancouver with learning and reading handicaps are not receiving lesson tapes which had previously been available to them through the University of B.C.

An official with the education ministry said the government is negotiating to provide these services but has only contracted with the university to provide special materials to the blind.

J.R. Meredith, superintendent of educational programs, said he had heard the accusations, did not know their origin and found it difficult to get substantiation.

"There is a variety of materials being provided for the youngsters. I don't know what led to this latest concern."

Meredith said he understands that UBC had been providing special materials to other than the blind, "and now doesn't see its way clear to doing it anymore."

Government pressed to give UIC aid to actors, directors

OTTAWA (CP)—Opposition MPs are pressing the government to extend unemployment insurance benefits to professional performing artists such as actors, opera singers, ballet dancers and stage directors.

The requests were made in the Commons by Cyril Symes (NDP—Sault Ste. Marie) on Thursday and by David MacDonald (PC—Egmont).

Both MPs, cultural critics for their parties, cited recommendations made last spring in a government-commissioned study known as the Disney report. They said the proposal was more crucial now because of federal budget cuts on arts spending leading to unemployment.

The Disney report recommended the government grant artists unemployment insurance coverage without removing tax privileges they received as self-employed persons.

Under current law, most self-employed persons cannot pay unemployment insurance premiums or draw insurance benefits when they are out of work. Special exceptions have been made for fishermen, taxi-drivers and barbers.

Cineplex maze of movies

TORONTO (CP)—A centre with 18 cinemas and a live theatre will open in downtown Toronto in the spring of 1979, developers say.

Architect Mandel Sprachman said the project, to be called Cineplex, would contain cinemas seating 50 to 120 persons, and a 300-seat theatre where dinners would be available.

Originator of the idea, N.A. Taylor, president of Cineplex, said tickets would be bought in advance from a computerized machine.

Movies would not be shown on the usual continuous basis, but would begin at different times to allow the theatres to be cleaned between screenings, Taylor said.

Films shown would not otherwise be screened in Toronto. "We will be able to show films that have never been seen in Canada or in the U.S.," he said.

Taylor said foreign and Canadian films, American films not distributed on the major circuits, and retrospectives would be shown.

"I firmly believe there's an audience for good films made anywhere in the world."

The $2-million project, part of the Eaton's Centre, will be developed by Taylor, H.S. Mandell and Garth Drabinsky, producer of the award-winning film The Silent Partner.

Mika doubtful of B.C. future

The outlook for B.C. in general and Victoria in particular is pretty gloomy, according to Saanich Ald. John Mika.

He told a regional planning and economic committee meeting Friday that the forest industry which forms the basis of the B.C. economy will come to the end of its first cut timber within 10 years, and after that there will be a far slower growth rate.

His intuition told him, he said, that the most gloomy predictions of the planning department were likely to come to pass, rather than the happier scenarios they were presenting in an endeavor to predict future population within the Capital Region district.

North Saanich Mayor George Westwood agreed, pointing out that in South America the industry is bringing trees to maturity in a few years, rather than in the generations needed in B.C.

Mika said he sees the Prairies as being on the edge of the boom because of its energy potential.

Planner Peter Hammer said ripple effects of such a boom could work through into the B.C. economy.

A report from the planning department forecast a population of 324,300 distributed among 144,100 households by 1996 if the economy maintains present levels of slight expansion and if the population growth rate from immigration continues at two per cent. Hammer said the birth rate is balanced by the death rate so that there is no natural increase in population.

On the other hand, if migration decreases because of lack of economic expansion, and Victoria's share of the provincial population declines, there will be only 290,000 people distributed among 149,460 households by 1996.

The planning department was instructed to go ahead with preparing amendments to the offical regional plan.

Nash back on air

Knowlton Nash, director of news and current affairs for CBC television since 1976, has been named chief correpsondent for the network's English language news. He will also replace Peter Kent as anchorman on The National and host the Newsmagazine current affairs program.

Region undercut, says Glazier

The provincial government is continually "subverting the legitimate aims" of regional government and a recent letter about recreation planning is a case in point, according to Victoria Ald. Murray Glazier.

Colin Campbell, provincial recreation and fitness branch director, had written to Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier, with copies to the other three core municipal mayors, telling them, in effect, to get together to plan recreation facilities. They could, if they wanted, get some representation from the Capital Region District on a policy committee, according to the letter.

The letter made it plain that unless the four municipalities got together the province would withhold funds.

Glazier pointed out that the letter came after a meeting at which M.C.M. Matheson, acting director of the recreational facilities program of the branch, had suggested that the region take over coordination of recreation in the Capital Region, and after the planning department had started work on a program aimed at a master plan.

The inter-municipal committee, said Glazier, had agreed to ask the three municipalities to appoint staff members to prepare terms of reference with outside municipalities and electoral areas invited to appoint representatives. This had been done, he said, because the committee had felt that it was acting on the directions of the branch.

Glazier said that Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf has been informed of regional plans, and the letter was apparently sent with full knowledge of those plans.

"We had an energetic discussion in the mayor's office about subverting the legitimate aims of the region," Galzier said, "but the reality is that this is the way we are directed to go, and we have lost the argument about regional control."

"Every time we turn around we are short circuited by the senior government in terms of legitimate regional functions," committee chairman George Westwood agreed.

It was decided to invite both Cameron and Matheson to a meeting to discuss government policy. "And we pointedly won't invite the minister," Saanich Ald. John Mika chimed in.

In the meanwhile, representatives from the Juan de Fuca recreation centre in the Western community and from the Panorama centre on the Saanich Peninsula will be asked to attend inter-municipal meetings on recreation.

SEARS AD. CORRECTION

Several errors appeared in Sears 'Show & Sale' ad. in Wed. Oct. 18 Times/19 Colonist.

The price on the Kenmore Powermate vacuum was incorrectly printed at $119.98—should read $199.98. 5-pce. dinette suite, the price was omitted and should read: $299.98, Reg. $329.98.

Our apologies for any inconvenience these errors may have caused.

Saanich Lions aiding new rescue service

The Saanich Lions Club has gone to the aid of the municipality's new marine rescue service.

The 22-member service club is offering to raise $5,000 to buy underwater equipment for the water safety program.

The service, to have been started earlier this year, suffered a temporary setback because of lack of funds.

Council budgeted $11,000 to buy an inflatable boat, two motors, boat trailer and scuba gear, but only $6,000 remained in the department budget after the transfer of $5,000 for emergency repairs to a pumper truck.

Aldermen will be asked to approve a fire committee recommendation that the inflatable boat, trailer and engines be bought at a cost of $6,800. The additional $800 would come from the municipal contingency reserve fund.

Fryer
...better help to police

Club member Michael Claxton, who will make the offer to council, said Friday the club would embark on a fund-raising venture similar to one last year when money was raised to buy a fetal heart monitor for the Royal Jubilee Hospital.

"We are interested in raising money to buy the scuba gear so the program can become operational as quickly as possible," he said.

Purchase of the scuba equipment would allow the fire department to assist police in underwater searches and the recovery of bodies, Fire Chief Arthur Fryer said.

M. V. Chesnut's Garden Notes

In my mail lately I seem to detect some confusion on the part of home gardeners regarding the proper storage of houseplants during their winter period of dormancy.

Because gladiolus, dahlias and begonia bulbs are given very cool storage to hold back their growth and discourage premature sprouting, a lot of my readers are jumping to the conclusion that houseplant bulbs, too, should be stored in a cold place.

This is all wrong, and I suspect that quite a lot of trouble, particularly with gloxinias, has been caused by the chilling of the bulbs in winter storage. These are all tropical subjects, and never in their natural wild state are they subjected to low temperatures.

In dormant winter storage here, they should be given about the same degree of warmth they would experience in their native environment.

Gloxinias and other bulbs of the Gesneria family should be stored at ordinary room temperatures—ideally between 18 and 22 C.—while Achimenes and the yellow Calla prefer it a trifle cooler, 12 to 16 degrees C.

A common cause of shrivelling in such bulbs is drying off the plants too abruptly after flowering ceases, or cutting down the topgrowth while the leaves are still green and functioning.

Actually, these bulbs should be "weaned" into dormancy by cutting down on their water very gradually, and the tops should never be cut away until the leaves have fallen and the stems are dried and withered.

The easiest way to store these bulbs—and the safest—is to leave them in their pots of soil all winter, shaking them out in the spring and repotting them into fresh soil.

During their winter rest, the soil in the pot should be almost but not quite bone dry; too much moisture would rot the inactive bulb, or start it into growth much too early for its own good, while dust-dry soil could cause the bulb to shrivel, either from dry rot or simple dehydration.

It isn't easy to achieve this happy medium, but I find that with a gloxinia in an average size pot, half a cupful of water once a MONTH will do the trick. Remember, though, that this is while the bulb is enjoying its winter rest, and at ordinary room temperatures; a plant in active growth will require much more water than this.

Regarding the Achimenes—this plant's name is pronounced ah-kim-MEE—neez and it is often nicknamed Cupid's Bower—I am rather surprised that most indoor gardeners are content to grow only the pink and purple kinds, for there are so many newer and better varieties available nowadays.

I imagine this is because most plants are started from slips or bulbs obtained from friends or neighbors, and few folks ever think to shop for them or look them up in a bulb catalogue. Actually, these tiny, scaly tubers—they look rather like miniature pine cones—are not at all expensive, running around 50 cents each for named hybrid varities.

Of these, Wetterlow's Triumph covers itself with enormous, brilliant pink flowers. Crimson Glory is a lovely rich red with some purplish overtones, while Dulcis is a grand white-flowered variety developed at Cornell University.

Galatea, a variety from India, is clear blue with a white throat. Menuett, new from the hands of Gustav Michelssen of Germany, is characterized by its vigorous growth and probably the largest flowers of any Cupid's Bower yet bred, blooming in a deep pink shade.

Ambroise Verschaffelt bears white flowers with purple lines in the throat. Harveyi is a compact, dwarf plant bearing vivid orange-scarlet flowers, a winner of the Royal Horticultural Society's coveted Award of Merit. Yellow Beauty, a new introduction from Holland, bears bright golden yellow flowers, a rare color in Achimenes.

Melvin Maddocks

A new survey titled Social Standing in America concludes that the highest of high-status positions in our upwardly mobile eyes is president of a billion-dollar corporation. To be boss is still the American Dream, according to the findings of Richard P. Coleman and Lee Rainwater — and the more boss, the better.

Right on cue, another book is appearing shortly to tell the ambitious young man or woman how to become the president of a billion-dollar corporation. After interviewing more than a hundred of the mightiest bosses, Robert J. Schoenberg has written The Art of Being a Boss. If we are to believe the songs he records from the catbird seat, they all got there by Hard Work, Enthusiasm, and tons of Fair Play.

It's sort of like a late-night Horatio Alger rerun, with plenty of time out for commercials. (General Motors, Sara Lee, and Texas Instruments are among the companies fearlessly endorsed by the men who run them.)

Lolling amid the carved wainscoting, the original paintings, the burnished model fire engines, the Georgian fireplaces with brass andirons that go to make up their working space, the bosses agree that an aspirant has to be "hungry" to get where they are. You comers also have to be "aggressive" and "self-confident" — have to "know you are right, so your people will gladly follow your lead."

Tramping ruthlessly on his thick wall-to-wall Oriental (we can imagine), one boss growls: "Everybody should spend a year in the Marines because you learn, 'I can march that extra 15 miles with a pack on my back.'"

Discipline is saluted all over the place.

The younger bosses, it seems, also believe in "style." "Have flair. Be excitable. Be exciting," one boss reccommends, admiring the mystique of a colleague who makes a point of reading a book as he strolls pensively down the hall to his board meetings.

But underneath all the gobbledygook about "positioning yourself on the probable opportunity path" and "conceptualizing" your strategy according to "vigorous analytic controls," most of the advice is more or less bluntly telling you to go for it, with all the directness of a Latin American dictator.

The true boss, it appears, wants to have his own way. Several confess they would abolish their board of directors if they could — not to mention, presumably, those interfering busybodies in Washington known as The Government. As for the folk under you: "If you think a guy is not doing a job, you fire him fast. Really fast."

Golly, talk about your hardball!

Then suddenly the flames in that Georgian fireplace subside to a glow, violins are heard on the soundtrack, and words like Service begin to drop gently from the boss's lips. Forget the profit sheets! The money means nothing. It's peoople — the smiles on the faces of workers and customers. That's what makes it all worthwhile.

The odd thing is, the protestations are mostly sincere, as Finley Peter Dunne recognized in the case of John D. Rockefeller: "He doesn't care for money in the passionate way you and I do... The likes of us are as crazy about a dollar as a man is about his child when he has only one. But my friend, John D., having a large and growing family of dollars takes only a kind of general interest in them."

What about lust for power then? — so popular a topic these days. It may come closer, but it finally explains the boss no more than lust for money. In a third new book, The Challenge of the Mahatmas, Martin Green correctly characterizes the "lust for power" as "built into our imagination."

The boss — the billion-dollar corporation president — is a myth we, and he, can well do without, trapped between his pretenses of macho self-interest and his pretenses of pious altruism. In fact, if he is something less than Saint Francis, he is certainly something more than Darwinian beast-of-the-jungle. In treating Tolstoy and Gandhi, Green suggests a third way to imagine a leader, a boss — as a powerful person who "uses power against itself, against all the truly sinister manifestations of that lust."

Maybe women in high places will help. But in any case, enough of the old stereotypes, glorified and vilified for more than a hundred years! Bring on the anti-boss!

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — As the conscience of America, I have been giving a lot of time and thought to recent events surrounding the Soviet defector Arkady Shevchenko and his paramour Judy Chavez.

While all the facts in the case have not been disclosed (we have to wait for Judy's and Arkady's books to get the rest of them), this much is agreed upon by everybody.

Shevchenko had a high position in the UN when he came over to our side. He met, or was given, as a reward, Miss Chavez who worked for an "escort" service in Washington. He paid Miss Chavez $500 a night for her friendship, and spent between $35,000 and $40,000 on her for gifts and a trip to the Virgin Islands. He was known in the CIA as "the spy who was never cold."

The facts that are in dispute are whether Mr. Shavchenko paid for Miss Chavez' services out of his own pocket or whether they were paid for by the CIA to keep him happy and talking. If Arkady spent his own money, he was taken advantage of for being a foreigner. But if the CIA paid for the undercover operation, then the taxpayers have a right to ask some questions.

The first is: Why on earth was the CIA paying Miss Chavew $500 a night when the going rate for this sort of thing is $100? If Arkady was paying for it, why didn't someone in the FBI or CIA warn him that he was being overcharged for Miss Chavez' nightly companionship?

If the CIA is footing the bill, as Miss Chavez claims, it means there is a serious lack of cost control in the agency when it comes to providing escorts for Soviet defectors.

No loyal American would take issue with the fact that a high-ranking Soviet official, who wants to come over, should get anything he wants from the CIA in exchange for intelligence secrets.

But when you start paying outrageous prices for close encounters of this kind, you are not only contributing, as President Carter said at his press conference, to inflation but you are setting a precedent for other Soviet defectors, which the United States can ill afford.

The next defector will also expect a $500-a-night female companion, and if she is paid less he will feel that the CIA is not treatng him with the same respect they did Arkady. How many "escorts" can our intelligence agency supply at these rates before it starts shortchanging our other spy operations?

Even if the CIA can afford it, other friendly intelligence organizations are furious about the publicity given to the Shevchenko-Chavez affairs.

"We've never paid our girls more than $50 a night," a French intelligence agent told me. "This puts every Western intelligence agency on the spot. The CIA has made the price of sex so high, we may not be able to use it any more as the ultimate weapon."

An Israeli agent thought Arkady was a KGB plant. "What better way to break the CIA budget than to have a defector demand a woman with expensive tastes, a yen for beautiful cars and a desire to make love in beautiful resorts. We could have put up a spy satellite for what it cost the Americans to keep Arkady talking."

Because of all the publicity, the CIA must now give Shevchenko a new cover and move him to a safer city than Washington.

I suggest Cleveland. It is not only a nice place to live, but the going rate there for an "escort" is $35 a night including taxi fare. Making Arkady live in Cleveland while they debriefed him would certainly save the CIA a lot of money.

James Bacon's Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD — Quite an interesting interview America Alive, the new NBC-TV midday show, had with Jane Russell, who said she never had anything to do with Howard Hughes romantically.

"I wouldn't know Howard Hughes from Howard Smith," said Geraldine.

Jane's revelation was not only true, but here's something even Jane never knew. Howard Hughes was scared to death of her.

"That woman terrifies me," Howard once confided to me. "Look what she has just done to me."

What she had just done was get a 30-year contract out of Howard that paid her $1,000 a week. Howard may have departed but the weekly check still comes in — and will until 1981.

Howard also said, with some logic:

"I'm not going to fool around with a married woman, especially when she is married to Bob Waterfield."

In those days, Bob was the best quarterback in pro football. Come to think of it, I haven't seen any better since.

In those days at RKO, Jane knew how to handle herself with Uncle Howard. At the time, Howard had about 20 of the most beautiful actresses in town all on the string — from Linda Darnell to Elizabeth Taylor, who, at the time, was between husbands Nicky Hilton and Michael Wilding. That was six husbands ago.

Remaking a point

What was known as Black Ball ferry terminal site has, once again, become Ship Point, name which was in use during time of tall ships. Plaque to commemorate opening of Inner Harbor wharf is unveiled by Victoria Mayor Michael Young. With him are Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf and Senator Ray Perrault. Ship Point wharf, which cost about $350,000, is part of over-all development of Inner Harbor. Landscaping and demolition of old ferry terminal cost another $100,000. Total Inner Harbor improvement project, including work already done, such as lower causeway construction and removal of old CPR finger wharf, relocation of ferry and acquisition of former Reid site, is estimated at $2.5 million, of which federal government has committed itself to $1 million. Remainder is financed by provincial government. Entire project is carried out under auspices of Provincial Capital Commission.

Buying a boat at the Empress hotel pub has made 25-year-old Grant Edward Wright, of East Sooke, a poorer but wiser man.

Judge Leslie Cashman in Victoria county court Friday found Wright not guilty of being in possession of a Zodiac inflatable rubber boat, knowing it to have been stolen, and which Wright said he bought from a person he knew only as Brian.

There was no doubt the accused man was extremely foolish, "but we have not yet got to the point in our system of criminal justice where we convict for being stupid," Cashman said.

There also was no doubt Wright would lose the $600 he said he gave for the 10½-foot craft shown to him just outside the Beaver pub by a man who said he had owned it for two years.

But Wright said, "I didn't know it was stolen. There was nothing to lead me to believe it was." He thought he got a reasonable deal, considering the asking price of $700 and the market value at that time of between $750 and $900.

Called to the stand by defence counsel Derek Finall, the accused man said he had been looking for a Zodiac boat for about three weeks in August last year but was unable to locate any second-hand.

In speaking to Beaver bar manager Richard Pomeroy, Wright learned of a man who was offering one for sale, and about the first week of September Pomeroy introduced him in the pub to "Brian."

They discussed the boat and price and the following day Brian brought the inflated boat to the Beaver on top of his van, where Wright examined it, helped unload it for a better look, and lifted it onto his own truck when the seller accepted his offer.

Brian was described as someone Wright had never seen before or since, a short, well-spoken, straightforward person with curly hair. "I think he was English," Wright said. But having asked about him during the past two months, Wright has been unable to trace the man. "As far as I can gather he went to Europe."

The crown said the boat, identified by a serial number, was the property of Simon Fraser University, purchased in May, 1976, for $1,065 but with a retail value of $1,250. It was stolen from Bamfield marine station in October, 1976.

On June 9 of this year, police investigating an inquiry from Zodiac Marine Ltd., 1218 Wharf, found the missing boat at the firm's dock where it had been taken for repairs by Wright. Wright was arrested there and the boat was seized.

He told police he had bought the boat for $600 at the Beaver. Zodiac Marine employee Raymond Weisberger said the boat then needed about $100 in repairs and would be worth between $750 and $900. Similar boats purchased new in June of this year would cost $1,650, he said.

"I would agree he thought he was getting a good deal," said prosecutor Peter Birkett. "He was getting an article worth considerably more." Birkett said the test was whether the court believed Wright's story, and Cashman, noting the forthright manner in which Wright gave evidence, said he found no hesitation in doing so.

MELBOURNE (Reuter) — Doug le Poideven, 58, fulfilled his ambition and caught a big codfish, but died from excitement as he hauled it in. He dragged the 80-pound fish from the Murray River but collapsed as his grandson Brian rowed him towards shore.

COOK OFF TO FIND ENGLAND

Kelvin Andrew, the man who plays Captain James Cook for the Cook bicentenary celebrations, leaves Victoria next week with Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy to attend the opening of a Cook Birthplace Museum at Marton in Yorkshire.

A Captain Cook Heritage Trail has also been developed, primarily for the benefit of tourists, in a celebration which lasts until next February.

Forest fire costs rise

Fighting forest fires in B.C. this year cost $11 million more than budgeted and four times more than last year, a spokesman for the B.C. Forest Service said Friday.

Russ Campbell said the service spent $3.3 million last year to fight 1,800 fires throughout the province, and $13.3 million this year to combat 2,300 fires.

He attributed the drastic increase in costs to drought conditions during the last winter and spring, and to inflation.

Campbell said the government budgeted $2 million for forest-fire fighting this year, well below the 10-year average.

The remainder will be paid through special warrants.

He said the Prince Rupert area had the fewest fires but the highest expenditure—$6.4 million—much of which was spent to douse a fire near Kitimat started by a careless smoker.

Campbell said the public was not the major cause of most fires as has been the case in past years.

BCR embargoes perishables

PRINCE GEORGE (CP)—The British Columbia Railway placed an embargo on all perishable goods this week in anticipation of a strike by railway employees.

"This was done because we don't want to have perishable goods sitting in a rail car if the unions walk off the job (today)," BCR spokesman Hugh Armstrong said.

The Joint Council of Railway Unions, representing seven unions comprising nearly 3,000 employees, served 72-hour strike notice at noon Wednesday. The unions have been without a contract since July 31.

The railway union council told its members that the decision to serve strike notice was taken reluctantly, but that the BCR had not bargained realistically.

"The railway seems to be confident in its position with the Essential Services Act and other legislation to back it up," the council said in a news release.

However, the unions have decided not to picket BCR facilities until the council can implement an effective procedure to have a maximum impact.

The council said it wanted to avoid any wildcat walkouts by its members, which it felt would be detrimental to its bargaining position.

Meanwhile, Armstrong has denied that services are already being chopped in anticipation of a strike.

Kevin Rhodes, national secretary of the transportation employees union, said earlier that enginemen and maintenance personnel were being laid off, and that the railway was running only two freight trains between here and North Vancouver, instead of the normal three.

Anti-drink awards $10,000

KAMLOOPS (CP)—Scholarships totalling $10,000 will be awarded to British Columbia high school students who generate awareness of the problem of impaired driving, Attorney-General Garde Gardom announced this week.

The scholarship money will come from provincial lottery revenues and will be distributed on a regional basis.

Students will compete for 30 bursaries worth $250 each and five $500 bursaries.

$1-a-letter service beating mail strike

TORONTO (CP)—Torontonians frantic to get letters out of the country can do so by paying $1 each to Noreen Howes, an enterprising University of Toronto student who has turned a walkout by inside postal workers into a booming business.

She ships the letters to Lewiston, N.Y., where they are put into U.S. mailboxes.

"We've been getting about $500 a day since the strike started," Miss Howes said Thursday.

The twice-daily service involves putting the mail on an express bus to St. Catharines, Ont., where a friend picks it up, puts postage on it and takes it across the border to Lewiston.

She provides a Lewiston postal box number as a return address for replies.

PM's revisions open door to autocracy—senators

OTTAWA (CP)—An autocratic government could emerge if Prime Minister Trudeau successfully passed his proposed Senate revisions, a Senate report said this week.

The report, prepared by a team of Liberal and Progressive Conservative senators, said federal constitutional proposals would remove the brakes on autocratic behavior by the government.

The proposals, unveiled by Trudeau last June, would replace the Senate with a house of the federation, to be filled almost equally by appointments by provincial legislatures and the Commons.

During the Senate committee's hearings into Trudeau's proposals, senators remarked that while they rarely used their veto power, its existence prevented the government from passing radical legislation or becoming dictatorial.

Under the house of federation idea, the chamber would be able to delay legislation for only six months.

The report said the various provincial appointees could use this six-month delay to seriously obstruct important national bills. All senators are now appointed by the federal government and less influenced by provincial politics, which often conflict with federal aims.

One of Trudeau's most controversial constitutional revisions deals with the monarchy. Many senators earlier expressed the fear Trudeau was trying to reduce the queen's powers.

Brewer woes irk Levi

Canadian Press

B.C. breweries are being blackmailed into bailing the Social Credit government out of its United States beer bungle, Norman Levi (NDP—Vancouver-Burrard) said Friday.

Levi, the party's consumer and corporate affairs critic, said in a news release he has met with brewing company officials who are "livid at the government suggestion they pick up the loss when liquor stores are forced to dump some 500,000 cases of U.S. beer within the next few weeks."

Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair disclosed last week the breweries have agreed to cover any government losses on the sale of U.S. beer in exchange for being allowed to sell their products in full force in B.C. liquor stores.

The U.S. beer was brought in by the Liquor Distribution Branch to meet consumer demand during a labor dispute in the B.C. brewing industry in the summer.

Levi said the fact the deal is "backed by the threat that liquor stores will hold back on ordering B.C. beer makes it a clear case of blackmail."

He said the deal is even more insulting because neither Mair nor any person from the liquor administration has met with the breweries to make the proposal.

NDP PRESSES SLUSH FUND OUTCRY; WHERE'S THAT $650,000? ASKS DAILLY

Canadian Press

The New Democratic Party continued Friday its attack on the government's use of lottery profits which it says are being used as a political slush fund.

Eileen Dailly (NDP—Burnaby-North) said she would like to know where $650,000 spent on forestry has gone, and why it came out of lottery funds rather than the forest ministry's budget.

Mrs. Dailly said the amount was disclosed in a list of disbursements sent by Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy to the B.C. Recreation Association.

"We already have a ministry of forests in this province," Mrs. Dailly said. "Expenditures for forestry should come from the ministry and not from a fund which is supposed to be used for recreation, culture and health."

She said the list also has $1,260,000 under miscellaneous which she said was an unusually large sum for that category.

She said she would like to know if the amount included the $100,000 that was taken from the fund to build a footbridge in Coquitlam at the request of George Kerster, Social Credit MLA for the area.

When she disclosed the $100,000 grant for the footbridge, Mrs. Dailly expressed fears the government was using the lottery fund as a slush fund to help re-elect Social Credit MLAs who are in trouble.

Mrs. Dailly then asked Auditor-General Erma Morrison to look into the disbursements, and Mrs. Morrison indicated this would take time because of a staff shortage.

Mrs. Dailly said Friday she was pleased Mrs. Morrison would investigate the fund, and suggested "if Mrs. Morrison can't afford staff, she might consider going to the lottery fund for a grant."

Tighter UIC spells $40-million B.C. bill

VANCOUVER (CP) — New unemployment insurance regulations will cost British Columbians up to $40 million a year because more people will be forced onto the welfare rolls, Human Resources Minister William Vander Zalm said Friday.

The federal government, which initiated the changes to reduce costs and abuses of the system, says the changes will cost the provinces a combined total of $50 million in welfare spending.

"Our income assistance program is already feeling the impact, said Vander Zalm, who was attending the Social Credit party convention here. "We're seeing a different crowd at our human resources offices—people who should be on unemployment insurance."

Labor Minister Alan Williams suggested that, as an alternative to the proposed cuts, total family income should used as a criterion for benefits.

He said the most recent figures available show that 87 per cent of all unemployment insurance is paid to second wage earners in a family and 13 per cent to heads of households.

Williams said money saved through the changes should be spent on training for permanent private sector jobs and not on public make-work projects.

Saanich backs police cost-cut plan

Saanich taxpayers can expect substantial relief from high police costs if a joint recommendation of council and the police board is implemented by the provincial government, Mayor Mel Couvelier said Friday.

The saving would have amounted to $800,000 in the municipality this year if policing costs were shared by everyone in the province on a per capita basis.

The recommendation is contained in a nine-page brief to the B.C. Police Commission which two months ago released a study on policing costs.

Saanich considers the per capita basis to be superior and recommends this method be emphasized in any cost-sharing formula eventually adopted.

Thirteen of the province's municipalities, of which Saanich is one, maintain their own police forces but the rest have contracts with the RCMP under which they share the costs with the federal government.

"It would save us at least a million dollars a year in policing costs if we had a contract with the national force rather than having our own department," Couvelier said.

Saanich has been penalized economically for having its own police force, the brief says.

A municipality of comparable population with an RCMP contract would, last year, have paid $720,000 less than Saanich in police-related costs, with the remainder being subsidized by the provincial government.

In addition, the brief says, deficiencies in manpower resources created by training, holidays, and extended sick leave have to be countered internally, either by diminished non-essential services or through overtime, while "contract" centres can depend on the manpower resources of neighboring RCMP jurisdictions.

The brief condemns any move toward a regional police force in Greater Victoria as proposed by the task force.

The board and council, however, agreed there is a need for some sharing of specialized services.

'Postal workers won't back down'

By DON COLLINS
Colonist reporter

Postal workers in Victoria are dug in for a fight and don't intend to retreat, even if the men from the federal justice department start showing up with injunctions.

That was the mood expressed Friday as the striking inside workers continued for the second day with most of their counterparts across the country to defy Ottawa's back-to-work legislation.

"I don't think it will have much effect on the larger locals," said Daniel Stewart, first vice-president of the Victoria local of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers following the announcement that the government would seek injunctions to stop picketing initially in five cities—Halifax, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

While Justice Minister Otto Lang expects the injunctions to be ready for serving by Monday, local postal workers think it may be only a matter of time before they find themselves up against the same action.

"I don't think our people will start backing down just because the justice department is coming up with something new each day," said Stewart.

Rank-and-file members who man the six area picketlines expressed similar sentiments.

Lang had indicated he felt people would be encouraged to return to the job when confronted with the cold reality of a judicial order.

Meanwhile, Stewart confirmed that only two of the 240 members of his local had reported for work Friday. Members of the local voted by an 81 per cent margin Thursday to stay out in spite of the fact they would now be consider lawbreakers.

In another development, the B.C. Federation of Labor moved into the planning stage of what is expected to be a huge rally in Vancouver on behalf of the embattled postal workers. It follows reports of growing union support across the country.

The groundswell began to show up Wednesday night when delegates to the Victoria Labor Council vowed to fight alongside the postal workers in what was seen as a defence of the right to strike.

Stewart said Friday that members of other unions were already showing up on the CUPW picketlines in such places as Terrace.

The picketlines at the new Saanich postal plant, the Government Street post office and the four sub-stations are being honored by the Letter Carriers Union of Canada, but not by the small band of Public Service Alliance of Canada members who work at the Saanich plant.

The PSAC members say they are going to work reluctantly because of "intimidation" by post office management.

"The consensus of our meeting last night (Thursday) was that they can't give continued support to CUPW because of the existing legislation and the overwhelming feeling of intimidation they're getting from management—the plant (Saanich) has become a prison for them," said Fenton Dobbin, president of Local 20104 of the Union of Postial Communications Employees, which is a component of the 182,000-member PSAC.

Some 33 of his members are involved—23 working in maintenance of the new automated machinery, and 10 others as clerks.

"I know some who would personally like to stay out. They feel a picketline is a picketline, whether it is legal or not. They have very strong feelings about crossing picketlines.

"They find themselves being squeezed between two large objects—CUPW which wants their support, and management which is using intimidation to keep them on the job," said Dobbin.

He said management is using the language of the Public Service Staff Relations Act to try to convince PSAC members they would be guilty of staging an illegal strike if they didn't cross the picketlines. He says this is an overstatement and that the members would have to walk the same picketlines with signs of their own before they could be found guilty of such an offence.

Dobbin said management has also disallowed the normal use of telephones between union officials in Victoria and Vancouver—effectively cutting the main line of communications—and has also refused to accept verbal abuse at the picketline as an excuse for not coming to work.

The plan now is for the PSAC members to form in a group and be led through the line by a supervisor.

They are also being told they let the employer down (Thursday) when some stayed away, that they were giving their obligation to their union instead of to the post office.

"This sort of thing is very demeaning," Dobbin said.

He said they encountered no difficulty at all when passing through the line Friday.

Crew dismantles engine of icebreaker Camsell

Ship damage: how much?

A federal transport ministry survey team will be in Victoria next week to start the laborious job of assessing the extent of damage caused to the engine room of the Canadian Coast Guard icebreaker Camsell.

The 19-year-old vessel received two gashes on her port side—one eight feet and the other five feet—below the waterline when she struck ice in Queen Maude Gulf, east of Cambridge Bay, on Sept. 10.

The Camsell arrived back at her home berth in Victoria this week after a $1 million tow from the Arctic.

The team will be assessing damage to the electric motors and wiring in the engine room to see just how much has to be replaced, according to the ministry's district manager Larry Slaght.

The coast guard is still undecided how it will substitute for the Camsell this winter, supplying light stations and tending marine aids on the West Coast.

When gouged by ice, her engine room flooded and the ship sank so low in the water that her well deck was awash. She could have remained afloat for only about an hour if help had not arrived, Slaght said in an interview Friday.

It was the second time in three years that the vessel has suffered ice damage during her regular summer stint in the Arctic, escorting supply vessels.

Officially, the ship is classed as a medium icebreaker. In fact she is a buoy tender with an ice strengthened bow.

The Camsell was built by Burrard Dry Dock Co. Ltd., which is completing the second of two new icebreakers for service on the east coast.

Courier count now 40

So you can't wait until the end of the postal workers' strike to send that letter to Aunt Matilda.

Well, there are a lot of people around town who will accommodate you, if you're willing to pay more than the usual postage—say a few dollars more. Prices seem to run from $2.60 for an in-city delivery, to as much as $8.60 for same day service to Vancouver.

According to one post office spokesman, they range from the big familiar companies down to the "one-man band who gets a truck, and away he goes."

However, they're not all as enthused as you are about getting that letter to Aunt Matilda.

A spokesman for D-Line Carriers, for instance, says his company is "bogged down" with so much extra mail the loads that go out by seaplane eight times a day have doubled and possibly even tripled.

"But our top priority is our regular customers," says branch manager Bob Chamberland. "The regular customers have to come first."

SALMON BEGIN SPAWNING IN GOLDSTREAM

CAUTION—salmon spawning zone.

That's the message to park visitors from the Freeman King Nature House in Goldstream Park.

Chum, chinook and coho have started to spawn in the Goldstream River, which runs through the park.

In about a week, the salmon will start arriving en masse.

The Nov. 11 weekend is expected to be the peak period for the approximately 6,000 salmon expected this year, the nature house said Friday.

BUT UNTHINKING PEOPLE could be a problem, and the nature house has asked people to obey these rules:

- Don't disturb the salmon in any way. Don't throw rocks or poke at them with sticks.
- Don't put hands or feet into the water. Salmon have a keen sense of smell and frighten easily.
- Stand well back of the water. Animals, particularly dogs, should be chained and kept out of the water.

IF SALMON ARE "spooked" they may leave the spawning grounds and disrupt the natural completion of their cycle, a spokesman said.

If large groups plan to watch the salmon, they should book an appointment with the nature house at 478-9414.

The nature house is open seven days a week, from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., until Dec. 1. Natural history displays, slide shows, and salmon life-cycle exhibits are featured.

Oak Bay violates own sign bylaw

For nearly a year, Oak Bay municipality has been violating its own sign bylaw by advertising its recreation centre with a vacant-lot sign almost double the permitted size.

The sign blanks out signs on three stores in neighboring premises on Cadboro Bay Road near Foul Bay and has led to complaints from Oak Bay merchants about unfair competition from the municipality.

One, who asked not to be identified, told the Colonist Friday night: "If it were anyone but the municipality, that sign would have been down days after going up."

He said letters to council had produced no result other than an answer saying that the illuminated sign, about 90 feet square, would cost about $1,200 to move. According to the sign bylaw, the area of the sign cannot exceed the lot frontage, which is 47 feet.

Besides exceeding the maximum size, it also exceeds the maximum permitted height of five feet by eight feet.

The merchant pointed out that business lost by the adjoining stores—a wool shop, a florists and real estate office—probably amounted to more than that since the sign went up.

According to Oak Bay administrator James Craven, the violation arose out of a misunderstanding in a contract between the municipality and a sign company.

"We have been trying to iron it out and expect an agreement within a couple of weeks," he said.

FAREWELL TO SAGRES

The Portuguese sail training ship Sagres II is scheduled to leave Victoria at 9 a.m. today for Vancouver. She will not be under full sail. The vessel is visiting B.C. for the Captain Cook bicentenary.

Arsonist hits again

An arsonist is believed to have struck in the Cook Street area for the second successive night Friday, but prompt action by the Victoria fire department again prevented damage.

Friday's fire in empty cartons behind Telev Wauthy Electronics Ltd., 247 Cook, was reported at 8:31 p.m.

Thursday about 8 p.m., firemen were called to fight a garbage container blaze behind the Shop-Easy supermarket across the road from the electronics store, one of two deliberately lit. The other, at the Bartle and Gibson warehouse at Vancouver and Yates, destroyed about $5,000 worth of plastic piping.

Curtis hopes to plug water line loophole

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis said Friday he was optimistic that his ministry could work with Ottawa to produce a water purchase plan that was satisfactory to both B.C. taxpayers and federal departments located on the Saanich Peninsula.

Curtis said in a telephone interview from Vancouver that he was not satisfied with what appears to be the outcome of recent negotiations between the Capital Region District's engineering department and federal water users in North Saanich.

Curtis said federal-CRD negotiators produced a formula whereby four federal departments in North Saanich would use the peninsula's proposed water line and pay net water costs without having to contribute to payment of the debt, expected to be about $5 million by the end of 1979.

The negotiated formula, which means, in effect, that the B.C. government and taxpayers would be financing the pipeline for the benefit of the federal government, was advocated by CRD chief engineer Norman Howard at last week's Saanich Peninsula Water Commission meeting.

Howard headed the engineering department's negotiating committee.

Municipal representatives at the water commission meeting voted to take the plan to their councils and report back at the next commission meeting.

The four federal departments involved are the transport ministry and the defence department at Pat Bay Airport; the federal environment ministry's Ocean Sciences Institute on the southwest corner of former airport lands, and the federal agriculture ministry's experimental farm on the west side of Pat Bay Highway.

Curtis, in Vancouver where he was attending the Social Credit party's annual convention, said he was not in favor "of what appears to be the outcome of negotiations."

Curtis said he was therefore "elevating the negotiations" and pursuing the matter "at the highest elected level in Ottawa" with Defence Minister Barney Danson.

"It may be that Ottawa will have some tradeoffs. I'm not satisfied leaving it where it is.

"I have no indication that we should be pessimistic about the eventual outcome of negotiations with the federal government, but since it was through my ministry that the $3 million grant and water assistance fund was started, I'd be derelict in my duty if I did not pursue the thing at the highest elected level in Ottawa.

"I indicated I think the thing will work itself out if we take it one step at a time," Curtis said.

The debt will be financed over a 20-year period by the provincial government and taxpayers through the provincial Water Assistance Act and a $3 million grant announced recently by Curtis.

Fairweather

To him discrimination is no joke

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist reporter

That makes Gordon Fairweather see red.

A book published in 1954, The Public Speaker's Treasury Chest—A Compendium Of Source Material To Make Your Speech Sparkle contains 300 racist jokes, 200 ethnic jokes and 500 sexist jokes for a total of 1,000.

Fairweather leafs through the book and is grateful things are slowly changing.

Fairweather is chief commissioner of the Canadian Human Rights Commission which deals with violations of human rights in the federal public service, all crown agencies and that part of the private sector which comes under federal jurisdiction, such as banks.

Fairweather was in Victoria Friday to speak to about 250 members of the Women's and Men's Canadian Clubs during a luncheon at Holyrood House.

He related the taxi company incident to his audience, but wouldn't mention the name of the city.

He says Canada has come a long way toward eliminating discrimination and protecting human rights.

"We have ratified the United Nations covenants on human rights and the Helsinki Accord; all of the provinces have human rights legislation; Parliament has passed the Canadian Human Rights Act," he told his audience.

But much remained to be done, he added. Canada must make sure it lives up to its international commitments and that internal legislation is enforced, he said.

While there was a national consensus on the unacceptability of flagrant discrimination, Canadians were only beginning to come to grips with less obvious forms of discrimination, he said.

It was up to Canadians, Fairweather said, just how far they wanted to take the human rights issue. There also were a number of grey areas in which one principle seemed to contradict another.

"What about hate messages? Are the civil liberties of those who claim freedom of speech in slurring racial or religious groups more important than the discriminatory nature of their messages?

"Is the suppression of such messages more destructive to society than the messages themselves?"

There was room for debate, he said, but he tended to be in favor of the rights of the group being slandered.

Departing from his speech, Fairweather told of a woman in Winnipeg who demanded the commission ban the Socialist Party.

He said ridicule and laughter were more powerful than a ban and, at any rate, the human rights commission wasn't in the banning business.

Human rights, Fairweather said, must be universally applied to all people by virtue of their inherent dignity as human beings.

BY JIM TANG

One victory doesn't often a story make, but there was an exception at Sandown Park Friday when Major Return won the fifth race.

Piloting Ian Murdoch's three-year-old gelding was a 25-year-old Victorian named Pat Owen, and it wasn't only her maiden victory but it was the first for a female rider at Sandown Park.

And it was the result of a fine ride which made many a male bettor wish he hadn't been so chauvinistic when it came time to make his fifth-race decision.

That Major Return, which deserved to be no worse than second mutuel choice, went off at almost 9-1 was undoubtedly due to having a distaff rider in the irons.

But it wasn't a 9-1 run.

On the rail, Major Return broke smartly and stayed on the front end all the way as Chili Chinook and Room For One challenged early and failed and favored Remi Tike came too late with too little and settled for place money.

It wasn't the way Miss Owen had planned her ride, but she profited from taking what was there.

"I thought front-runners weren't doing too well and I planned to take him off the pace," she said. "But he was running so easily I let him go."

It was the sixth ride for Miss Owen, who has been riding show horses "since I was a little girl." She was no closer than fourth in four Exhibition Park chances and on Wednesday at Sandown took show money with Tuff To Bluff.

There was satisfaction but no immediate post-race elation, but that might have been tempered by thoughts of what could be awaiting her on her return to the jockeys' room.

Reminded that she could expect the traditional dousing with a bucket of water, she said, a bit fearfully, "I hope that's all they do to me."

Stealing the show Friday among the runners was Woodland Shadow, a three-year-old gelding making only its fourth start.

Woodland Shadow just ran away from the field in the featured Shriners Day Allowance Purse, doing the six and a half furlongs in 1:19 4/5 — outstanding considering the deep cushion and believed to be the fastest time for the distance since the thoroughbreds returned to Sandown in 1975 after a five-year absence.

It was never close as Travis Wilkinson got his mount away quickly from the No. 1 post, and the pursuit until the late yards was about 10 lengths behind. Will She Be Frisky closed well but didn't come close.

It was the second win for Woodland Shadow, which made its debut in Exhibition Park mud on Sept. 11 by winning an $8,000 maiden claimer. A half-length miss and show money in a $10,000 claimer moved things along a bit quickly and Woodland Shadow failed in the slop against handicap stock over a distance. But off that Friday run, Sunland Acres has the likely favorite for the Vancouver Island Derby.

BREAKAGE: There was more fan enthusiasm Friday, but the attendance of 1,583 and the mutuel handle of $123,582 didn't generate the same feeling among Capital City Turf Club directors...one exception was Derek Green, who got an impressive maiden victory from Antonio Sanchez. And Green and CCTC president George Harknett might share the fifth-race Exacta today with Pickle Pie and Ole Par looming as the two top choices...apprentice Ray Creighton, thrown against the railing, was injured during a morning workout and had to take the day off. It picked things up for replacement Gary Demorest, who won with Devils Daughter and Zippers Quicker...top rider for the day, however, was Travis Wilkinsom, who swept the last three races. Mark Walker made it six for seven rides by scoring with Antonio Sanchez in the first race, but that was his last Friday trip to the winners' circle...Maple Bud, who did well at Osoyoos this summer, and Polotouche were other easy winners Friday...some owners who had booked stall space have been slow in shipping their stock but racing secretary Aubrey Davies says he will have full stalls by Wednesday.

Flames hand Canadiens second straight setback

There is new hope in the National Hockey League that this isn't going to be another season of complete dominance by Montreal Canadiens.

Atlanta Flames, big and talented but a bit of a disappointment in other seasons, handed the defending champions a second straight defeat Friday night, and they did it with offence, getting seven of the 12 goals.

It was the second straight setback for Canadiens, who were beaten, 3-1, by New York Islanders on Tuesday after starting with three successive wins.

In other league action Friday, Vancouver Canucks took a 5-1 battering from Boston Bruins, Los Angeles Kings rallied to outscore Washington Capitals by 6-4, and St. Louis Blues and Colorado Rockies played to a 5-5 tie.

"We went straight for their net," said winger Eric Vail in explaining how the Flames took the points away from Canadiens.

"It was exciting. The bench was hopping all night long," said Atlanta-coach Fred Creighton. "So many people played well."

Leading 4-3 going into the third period, Atlanta put the game out of reach with goals by Vail, Willi Plett and John Gould. Montreal's last two goals, by Rich Chartraw and Mario Tremblay, came in the final two minutes of the game.

In Vancouver, where a record Pacific Coliseum crowd of 16,413 greeted Canucks on their return from an 0-2-1 road trip, the Bruins were led by muscular John Wensink, who has been a bit of a scoring surprise this season. Usually considered as muscle, Wensink got his fourth and fifth goals as the Bruins remained unbeaten through a fifth game.

Terry O'Reilly and Peter McNab, who both had assists on Wensink's goal, each scored once. The other Boston goal was scored by Stan Jonathon, who made a further contribution by getting the best of Vancouver-intimidator Randy Holt in a short exchange.

Three goals in the last 11 minutes brought the Kings their second win. Steve Jensen got the winning goal at 16:28 and Butch Goring provided insurance at 18:04.

Ron Grahame had 18 saves for the Kings and also assisted on his club's first goal. Glen Goldup had three assists.

Bernie Federko climaxed a fine rally by the Blues with the 5-5 goal three minutes from time. The Rockies, losers of their first four games, were 3-0 leaders late in the second period, but they had trouble all the way with goalkeeper Phil Myre, who made 36 stops.

The Blues scored four straight goals in a span of just over eight minutes late in the second period and early in the third period to offset a dominance by the Rockies at the game's outset.

FLAMES GOALKEEPER Dan Bouchard traps puck between pads to foil scoring bid by Guy Lapointe of Montreal during Friday night action in Atlanta where the Flames outscored the Stanley Cup champion Canadiens 7-5.

Colonist handicap

By JIM TANG

Sandown Park, Saturday, October 20 (third day)

FIRST RACE, claiming $2500, maiden three- and four-year-olds, purse $1200, one mile.

110-10 Arson Harry (Walker)	115	3
1- 1 Our Neelie (Frazier)	*107	6
106- 1 Cotton Kacy (Stein)	112	2
106- 2 Khala Favor	*107	7
108- 2 Blue Sabre (no rider)	*110	1
110- 2 He's A Hermit (Demorest)	110	4
106- 2 April Foolish (Wilkinson)	*110	5

ARSON HARRY ran well against winners, might prefer it a bit longer; OUR NEELIE has advantage of a run over the track, the one to beat; COTTON KACY should find conditions to liking; KHALA FAVOR appears most likely of others.

107- 4 Gum Sarn (Rocha)	110	4
1- 3 Mi Soldier (Carter)	*119	2
108- 4 Dr. Hess (Bray)	123	5
106- 5 Nicola Captain (Wilkinson)	*115	1
105-10 Local Boy (Demorest)	116	3
105- 2 Pacific Rim (Owen)	113	7
1- 3 Austin Tayshush (Frazier)	*111	8

Also eligible:

3- 4 Moon Golfer (Frazier) *110

SCRATCH HARRY close up in last [illegible] never get better chance; GUM SARN has be[illegible] four of last five starts, this not too tough; [illegible]DIER likes the surface and has had a run; [illegible]SS has great chance to end long winless stretch.

THIRD RACE, claiming $2500, maiden three- and four-year-olds, purse $1200, one mile.

110- 2 Strong Muscles (Dailey)	115	1
110- 2 Bud N Wendy (no rider)	*110	2
109- 6 Naughty Nytee (Frazier)	*107	5
110-10 McGregors Lad (Wilkinson)	*110	3
1- 2 Dr. Broker (Rocha)	110	4
1- 4 Playful Lady (J. Loseth)	110	6

STRONG MUSCLES has the best credentials in this group; BUD N WENDY seems like main threat on fast track; NAUGHTY NYTEE has speed and perhaps can carry it for a mile; MCGREGORS LAD did best in the mud, soft surface could help.

107- 5 Pax Princess (Carter)	116	2
107- 5 Blaven (Walker)	116	1
102- 6 Dais Abbie (Demorest)	114	3
109- 6 Woodmont Claire (no rider)	*113	6
108- 6 Mini Chick (Wolski)	114	4
99- 7 The Lady is Tramp (Bray)	120	5

PAX PRINCESS has good post, is quick and tough but will need best; BLAVEN close against top one in last, reversal no surprise; DAIS ABBIE is seldom far away; WOODMONT CLARE sharp in maiden win, may be good enough to threaten in this.

FIFTH RACE, claiming $3200, three-year-olds and up, purse $1300, 6½ furlongs.

98-10 Pickle Pie (Demorest)	121	4
105- 6 Ole Par (Wilkinson)	*114	2
1- 8 Win Key (Walker)	120	7
106- 5 Ole Conkie (Bray)	119	3
102- 6 Lady Darkfoot (no rider)	*110	1
108- 6 Sassie Driver (Stein)	118	5
108- 6 Peggy Princess	*108	6
104- 1 Gay Debbie (Mena)	*110	8

PICKLE PIE has done well again this year, likes Sandown and is dropping; OLE PAR has never run this low, has good post but early challenge likely; WIN KEY will find these tougher but is sharp; OLE CONKIE hasn't had good year but there are signs.

106- 6 Aye Dee (Wolski)	111	5
105- 5 Tenelta (Walker)	114	3
106- 4 Jai Alai (Wilkinson)	*109	8
110- 2 Tanya Lynn (no rider)	*107	1
106- 6 Con Shot (Demorest)	114	2
109- 5 Hasty Money (M. Mena)	*113	4
108- 9 Marine Driver (Stein)	120	6
1- 7 Rock Melody (Tompkins)	*111	7

AYE DEE close against better and rates as the one to beat; TENELTA moving up but is at peak and may be good enough; JAI ALAI didn't get good post for style but will be tough if gets to front quickly; TANYA LYNN may be back to early summer form.

110- 6 Pacca (Walker)	116	3
109- 7 Smokein Rose (Frazier)	112	1
109- 7 Undercover Hero (no rider)	109	6
106- 9 Ask The Fleet	115	4
106- 8 Orlie's Jet (Dailey)	120	5
107-18 Fleet Avalanza (Mena)	114	7

EARL OF BON has track, distance and company which suit; PACCA could spoil party, question is if it's a bit short; SMOKEIN ROSE has won five and been on board 10 out of 13; UNDERCOVER HERO merits thought in fine field with total of 23 wins.

EIGHTH RACE—COLONIST HANDICAP, purse $2000, three-year-olds and up, one mile and seventy yards.

110- 9 Kimbob (no rider)	121	6
104- 7 Color Me Bold (Bray)	118	7
102- 9 Saucy Verdict (Wilson)	122	4

Braves snap tie for top

Saanich Braves won the battle for first place in the South Island Junior 'B' Hockey League Friday night, defeating Esquimalt Legion Blues 7-5 at the Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Braves upped their record to 6-1 while Blues fell to 5-2.

Ron Jobson scored three goals for Saanich, which led 3-2 and 6-4 by periods. Dave Prince, Bruce Tuck, Tracy Patterson (plus three assists) and Wayne Larsen completed Saanich scoring.

Cougars back home to entertain Breakers

Home at last after a typical tour of the prairies, Victoria Cougars play host tonight to another road-weary Western Hockey League aggregation.

Well, maybe not quite so weary as the Cougars but eager to be homeward-bound nonetheless.

Seattle Breakers, who evened their record on their current swing to 3-3-2 with a 3-2 victory over the Wranglers in Calgary Friday night may be at a disadvantage after the long haul from Alberta but they bring with them a better record against Central and Eastern Division clubs than Victoria boasts.

Cougars, who've had a day's rest, were 2-5-1 on foreign soil, though they stayed close most of the time.

Because of the simultaneous road swings, both clubs have played more than division rivals Portland and New Westminster. As a result, Seattle and Victoria will be fighting for first place tonight at Memorial Arena even though they both have losing records. Game time is 8:30 p.m.

Seattle goaltender Ken Hodge relieved starter Allan Wiebe late in the first period Friday and shut out Calgary Wranglers the rest of the way.

Seattle coach Les Calder called on Hodge after Calgary scored on two of their first seven shots to assume a 2-1 lead at 13:43 of the first period.

While Hodge shut the door, stopping 35 Wrangler drives, Seattle scored twice in the second period to pull away to the victory.

Meanwhile, Brandon Wheat Kings continued to be awesome at home, blasting Saskatoon Blades 12-3 to remain unbeaten. In Regina, the Pats took it to Edmonton Oil Kings, winding up with their first win of the season, 8-3.

Doc's Blues win playoff opener

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Doc's Blues of New Westminster, representing Canada, shut out New Zealand 5-0 Friday while the U.S. beat Australia 3-0 in semi-final playoffs of the World Women's Softball championships.

Today, the U.S. will play the winner of the Australia-Taiwan game and Canada will meet the winner of the New Zealand-Bahamas contest.

The Canadians beat Australia 5-0, El Salvador 8-0, the Netherlands 3-2, Zambia 39-1, Puerto Rico 3-1 and Guatemala 8-0.

Canada topped the A Division of the qualifying round. Australia, the Netherlands and El Salvador were next at 4-2. The United States led the B Division with a 7-0 mark while New Zealand and Taiwan followed at 5-2.

Head coach Adrian Lavigne feels his club has a good shot at the title, despite some injuries. Pat Boswell was sick with food poisoning and Miss Mick has a broken finger.

Arousing cheers main aim of Blue Angels

Blues claim NHL first

By BARRY WILNER

ST. LOUIS (CP) — The National Football League's cheerleaders have done some pretty good headline-stealing from the players this year. But there'll be no such upstaging in the National Hockey League.

"The guys on ice are the show, the thing the people come to see," says Pam Willenbring, the general manager of the Blue Angels, the first organized cheerleading group in the NHL.

"We're just another way to get the crowd enthusiastic about hockey, to get the fans cheering and behind the Blues," says Willenbring.

The Angels may have their work cut out for them. The Blues, once the proudest of the NHL's six 1967 expansion franchises, now are one of the league's weakest teams. But they also are the most promotion-minded. Hence the Blue Angels.

"We're not just cheerleaders," adds Willenbring. "The girls were hired as public relations workers. Their jobs, of course, include jazz dance and marching routines but they also make public appearances with players and probably will do commercials."

The Blue Angels (their name was selected in a fans' contest) made their debut last Tuesday during the Blues' 8-6 triumph over Vancouver Canucks.

"We came out about five minutes before the game," says Sue Schaefer, one of the Angels. "The fans were unbelieveable; their reaction was beautiful. . . . Before the game, while we were preparing, we heard a lot of comments, like 'Why do we need that?' People had been getting down on the Blues and I think we can help reverse that.

"The players also were positive about us. The more enthusiasm, the better."

One hundered girls tried out for the cheerleading team. The group was cut to 32, then eight St. Louis journalists selected the finalists.

"The tryouts weren't that rough, but practising to get ready was," notes Angel Vicki Forbes, a journalism grad from Penn State. "Sometimes we'd go for three or four hours, trying to learn the dance routines. We go through extensive choreography programs to get the timing and the steps down. I think the hardest part is keeping your concentration."

And what of the fans' concentration? With 16 pretty females parading through the arena or leading the cheers from their stage, can't the on-ice action become secondary in the viewers' eyes?

"We're not there to show lots of skin and flash smiles and be sexpots or any of that like with the NFL girls," says Forbes. "Cheerleading is becoming a joke. We're not interested in Playboy magazine."

The Angels wear all white uniforms that Schaefer calls "conservative but catchy and classy." They do their cheerleading throughout the game and perform dance routines during the intermissions.

"I think this might set a trend in the NHL," says Schaefer. "It's fun, it gets people involved and everybody has a good time."

Pam Martin, who choreographs some of the routines, thinks image is important but performance and popularity will determine the success of the Angels. She also thinks being an Angel will involve a lot more than cheerleading.

"I'm interested in dance, maybe going into modelling," she says. "Our routines involve a lot of moves used in disco modelling. As we get used to performing, we'll add more to the routines.

"Maybe we'll do some numbers on the ice. Who knows?"

Their performances on ice might be better than those the team is capable of. But at least that would give the fans something to cheer about every game.

Match heads toward draw

FAISALABAD, Pakistan (Reuter) — Pakistan led India by 75 runs with all its second innings wickets intact as their first cricket test match moved inexorably towards a draw on the fourth day Friday.

At the close of play Pakistan, 41 runs ahead on the first innings, was 34 for no wicket in its second innings. India declared its opening innings closed at 462 for nine, compared with Pakistan's 503 for eight declared.

India's hero was little Gundappa Viswanath, who became the first cricketer from his country to score a test hundred against all the major cricketing countries. From 78 not out at the start, he reached his century in only 35 more minutes.

He was finally out for 145 just before lunch when he tried to sweep Mushtag Mohammad and was bowled. His innings included 16 fours and lasted 315 minutes.

Pearson fastest

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — David Pearson turned in the third fastest speed over all in Friday's second round of qualifying for Sunday's $150,000 American 500 Grand National stock car race, earning 16th position in the 36-car lineup. Pearson's top speed of 141.217 miles an hour was second only to pole winner Cale Yarborough's track record 142.067 and Donnie Allison's 141.956.

Vic High extends string of shutouts

Still unscored upon after 10 matches, Victoria High Tyees are pulling away from the pack in the Greater Victoria high school soccer league's first division.

Goaltender Rob Kaye extended his record-breaking shutout streak and Mark Wyatt scored on an indirect free kick near the 25-minute mark Friday as Tyees edged Oak Bay Bays 1-0.

The decision lifted Vic High three points above their nearest rivals, Mount Douglas and Spectrum. They're tied in second place with 15 points each.

Thistles were idle but Spectrum blew a chance to keep abreast of Tyees by bowing 1-0 to Reynolds Roadrunners.

Scott Robertson intercepted a Spectrum header at 83 minutes and booted it home for the game's only score. Geoff Burkenshaw notched his fourth shutout for Reynolds, now a single point out of second.

In the second division, league newcomer Stelly's earned its third point by wrestling Parkland Panthers to a 4-4 draw. The point moves Stelly's two in front of last-place Esquimalt Dockers, who had a bye during the first day of two-divisional play.

Russ Windsor and Virgil Sampson netted two goals apiece for Stelly's while Stefan Rehm, Gord Fox, Ben Reeves and Russ Norbury replied for Parkland, which still clings to first by a point.

Elsewhere, Mike Adamek scored twice to lift Belmont Braves past Claremont Spartans 4-1. Belmont slipped into second place with the win, one point ahead of Claremont.

New device ready at Crystal

It doesn't walk. Or talk. It won't make up your shopping list for you.

But the city's new timing device (the term 'clock' just won't do), to be unveiled today at Crystal Pool, is apparently the wonder of the age. Well, at least it's an improvement on the old one.

City officials will officially unveil the device at 2 p.m., coinciding with the first swim meet of the season. The all-levels meet, sponsored by the Victoria Amateur Swim Club and the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association, starts this morning at 10, continues through the day and concludes Sunday.

The unique little marvel, small enough for easy portability, can be adapted for synchronized swimming and water polo and is adaptable for other sports, such as track and field.

Canadian puck bodies at loggerheads again

OTTAWA (CP) — After several months of peace, Hockey Canada and the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association appear to be at loggerheads again.

The CAHA wants the International Ice Hockey Federation (IIHF), the world governing body, to refuse approval of an exhibition series between European hockey teams and the World Hockey Association, scheduled this winter.

But Hockey Canada, which is supposed to be Canada's voice, in international hockey dealings, doesn't agree with that approach.

"We have all the makings of a squabble," Lou Lefaive, director of Sport Canada, the federal sport agency, and a member of Hockey Canada's board of directors, said Friday.

"But hopefully we'll find an accommodation," Lefaive added.

Hockey Canada and the CAHA reached an agreement on international hockey dealings in June at the insistence of Sport Minister Iona Campagnolo. Basically it gave Hockey Canada control of international hockey.

Now it appears the CAHA wants to upset the agreement, Lefaive said. "This issue raises the validity of the agreement."

The CAHA is trying to get WHA teams to pay it for the major junior players they draft every year but the league has balked. Hockey Canada thinks the CAHA should continue court action it has started against the WHA and not take the international route to get WHA agreement.

Lefaive said there is also the risk that the WHA could be in serious financial difficulty without the European series.

The European teams would likely withdraw from the WHA series if the IIHF refused to sanction the series because the Europeans would be barred from other international competitions.

Vikettes grab early lead

SASKATOON — Victoria Vikettes knocked off two opponents Friday to grab an early lead in the Canada West University Athletic Association field hockey championship tournament.

UVic started the day by slamming Calgary Dinnies 9-0, then followed up with a 1-0 squeaker over Saskatoon Huskiettes.

Jan Crook scored four goals, three in the first half, as Vikettes routed Calgary. Lynn Beecroft and Cindy James added two goals apiece and Terry Cruikshank completed scoring.

Cindy Bray's second-half goal made the difference against the host club.

Also unbeaten after the first day were Alberta Pandas and University of B.C. Thunderettes, each with 1-0 records.

The round robin continues today, as UVic meets Alberta, and Sunday. The winners advance to the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Association finals in Toronto Nov. 2-5.

Driver loses cancer fight

LONDON (Reuter) — Swedish racing driver Gunnar Nilsson died in hospital Friday after a nine-month battle against cancer. He was 29.

Nilsson had proved his potential on the world's racing circuit last year when he partnered American Mario Andretti on the Lotus team.

Nilsson scored his first and only win in the Grand Prix at Zolder last year on a treacherous rain-soaked track. Mechanical problems forced him out of seven events but he still finished eighth in the drivers championship.

Olympic pact finally signed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mayor Tom Bradley of Los Angeles and Lord Killanin of Ireland, president of the International Olympic Committee, formally signed a contract here Friday that will bring the 1984 summer Olympic Games to the West Coast city.

President Carter had planned to attend the ceremony in the Roosevelt Room but, said Bradley, could not get away from a meeting elsewhere in the mansion.

"We know what a steadfast friend and supporter of amateur athletics the president is," said Bradley at the ceremony which was conducted by presidential assistant Jack Watson.

It will be only the second time that the summer Olympics have been held in the United States; the other being held in Los Angeles in 1932.

"We hope to put on the Games that will be a matter of pride to the Olympic movement, the country and the city," said Bradley.

The Los Angeles mayor also made note of the year-long disagreement with the IOC over financial responsibility for any losses accrued by the games.

"We ran into problems but I am glad wise men can sit down and solve them." Killanin said. "I am personally very keen that the Games will be held in the United States and Los Angeles."

A little over a year ago, Los Angeles won out over New York City as the U. S. representative in the bidding for the 1984 Games.

Although no other city sought the 1984 Games, Los Angeles was not immediately confirmed because of its announced intention to hold a "spartan" Olympics and not take financial responsibility for any losses.

In an unprecedented move and after months of negotiations, the IOC backed down from its demand that the host city be held responsible and agreed to permit Los Angeles to stage the Games only after the USOC agreed to accept the burden normally undertaken by the host city.

Brewery drops racing support

TORONTO (CP) — A spokeswoman for Labatt's confirmed Friday that the brewery was backing out of its contract to sponsor next year's Formula Atlantic auto racing series.

Betty Verkuil, series co-ordinator for Labatt's, said letters advising of the company's decision to withdraw had gone out to the Canadian Automobile Sport Clubs (CASC), governing body of auto racing in Canada, and and Formula Promotions, a group of series entrants.

Labatt's, which sponsored the North American auto series for three years, signed a contract during the summer with Formula Promotions which ran through the 1980 season.

The brewery was to funnel $100,000 annually into the series as well as pay costs of televising five races on CTV's Wide World Sports.

"We feel we no longer have an obligation to Formula Promotions," Verkuil said. She refused, however, to elaborate.

The letters say the series "is not consistent with our marketing and promotions objectives for next year."

Mike Anderson, assistant secretary of John Labatt Ltd., London, Ont., said the brewery was getting out because, "for a variety of reasons, and I'm not going into any great detail at this time, we no longer consider the contract binding."

British Columbia is suffering from a problem that is reaching out to damage the lives of tens of thousands of our citizens, young and old, male and female. Its cost in physical destruction and lost productivity amounts to hundreds of millions of dollars a year. But the real toll in human suffering cannot be measured.

The problem is alcohol abuse - the unwise overindulgence in alcoholic beverages. You may not know it, but British Columbia is the most afflicted of all of Canada's provinces. Your government has decided to try to do something about it, and we're asking every citizen to help with the task.

My Ministry, starting today, is going to carry the message of alcohol misuse into every corner of the province. Sometimes alcohol is a social drink, but at all times it is a drug that must be handled with care.

The cost of this campaign will be paid for by those who drink through an additional levy on the price of some alcoholic beverages. The non-drinking public should not be expected to pay for the programme.

The abuse of alcohol has been a growing problem - one we must all help to solve. It is important for every individual who consumes alcohol to know how much is too much - how often is too often. For the good of everyone alcohol must be handled with care.

Province of British Columbia
Ministry of Consumer and Corporate Affairs.

The Honourable Rafe Mair, Minister.

Canadians share second place

PACIFIC HARBOUR, Fiji (CP) — Canada remained in second place in the team competition behind the United States after completion of third-round play Fridayin the Eisenhower Cup men's world amateur golf championship.

The U.S. leads with a 652 total, 17 shots ahead of both the Canadians—who shot 225 as a team—and Australia, tied with 669 totals. New Zealand is third at 674.

Gary Cowan of Kitchener, who was in second spot Thursday, soared to a 77 Friday for a 221 total but his score didn't count in the team competition.

Vancouver's Doug Roxburgh, who fired a 74 and remained in third spot in the individual competition at 220, Yves Tremblay of Tracy, Que., with a 75, and Dave Mick of Victoria, with a 76, were the Canadian scores that counted in the team total.

Wadkins has answer for critic

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Upset by accusations that he had not tried hard enough on the first day, Lanny Wadkins of the United States responded with a course record-equalling 68 in the second round of the Victorian professional golf championships Friday.

After his controversial first-round, three-over-par 75, Wadkins received a midnight international telephone call from his U.S. agent querying what all the fuss was about.

"We talked more about how the Yankees won the World Series than anything else," Wadkins said, after ending the second round six shots behind Australian Bob Shearer, who also fired a 68 for a 36-hole total of 137.

Wadkins clearly was still seething over tournament coordinator Doug Mason's complaint to Hughes Norton of Mark McCormack's international sports management group Thursday that Wadkins wasn't doing his best.

"Mason has made my week in Australia miserable. He's done a helluva job on me," Wadkins, the 1977 U.S. PGA champion, said. "So much so that I want to get the hell out of here and go home. I don't like unpleasantries."

Despite all the rancor, Wadkins gave a superb display of precision golf on the tight Woodlands course.

He was never over par for any hole, going out in 34 and returning with the same figure. He had a big gallery applauding warmly when he birdied the tricky par-four 18th with a putt of 25 feet.

For all his efforts, Wadkins could not gain on Shearer, the hometown idol, who had been in a four-way tie for the lead overnight but shot three strokes clear at the half-way mark.

Graham Johnson of Australia was second at 140, with Guy Wolstenholme of Britain, who also shot a 68, next at 141. They were followed by a group of three including Wadkins.

Faldo clings to lead

WALTON HEATH, England (AP) — Nick Faldo, a lanky, 21-year-old Englishman, kept a stoke ahead of Tom Weiskopf in a head-to-head battle for the lead Friday in the $200,000 European Open golf championship.

Faldo played the Walton Heath course, lined with trees and deep heather,in three-under-par 70 and had a total of 138 for the first two rounds. He was eight-under par for the tournament.

Weiskopf, the seasoned U.S. touring pro, shot a 69, including three birdies on the long, par-five holes, and was at 139.

Greg Norman of Australia was in third place with 141.

Mac McLendon, another U.S. pro., shot a two-under-par 71 for the second straight day and was one of eight golfers tied for fourth at 142.

Sixty-one golfers qualified for today's third round over the 7,130-yard, course. The tournament ends Sunday.

Weiskopf, fresh from a hunting trip in the Yukon, said he had not played golf in five weeks and was surprised by his scores.

He was at his best on the long holes. He had birdies at the 513-yard second, the 489-yard sixth and 507-yard 11th, all of which carry a par five. He reached the second and 11th greens in two strokes, and at the sixth he blasted out of a bunker to within four feet and sank the putt.

But the last par-five hole, the 517-yard 14th, the heather came up and grabbed Weiskopf. His drive landed right in it, and his second shot was buried even deeper. He took four to reach the green and made bogey.

Faldo started the day two strokes up on Weiskopf. There were still two strokes between them after eight holes, but the American then hit a hot streak and birdied three holes in a row.

U.S. aces top French event

PARIS (AP) — Tom Watson and Lee Trevino of the United States shared the lead with 139s after the second round of the Lancome Open golf tournament Friday. Watson, the first-round co-leader at 68, shot a one-under-par 71. Trevino, in moving up from third, fired a 69 in the second-round in windy conditions on the St. Nom La Breteche course.

Veteran Gary Player of South Africa was two stokes behind in third with 141 after a second-round 69. Defending champion Graham Marsh of Australia, the co-leader with Watson on the first day, went eight-over par with a 77. He dropped to sixth over all with 145.

Japan's Isao Aoki, the leading Asian player, had a 74 on the first day, but improved with a 70 Friday to tie Andy North of the U.S. for fourth with 144.

Perspectives

By Rev. J. A. Davidson

During my nearly 30 years in the ministry, I have been too busy to worry about the vocational image of the Protestant clergy and it is that, probably, which has kept me from the identity crisis that seems to afflict so many of the clergy these days.

I have been aware, of course, of the clerical stereotypes which have been around for a long time, the ways in which many people in our society see the clergy. Some years ago, the late Ogden Nash wrote a couplet which reflects this to some extent: "To all things clergic /I am allergic."

Recently, I have noticed that Protestant clergy are generally given a rather bad time of it in television programs. Rabbis and Roman Catholic priests usually receive much better treatment: they are pictured as wise, kind, personable, tolerant, whereas Protestant ministers are pictured as either bigots or as well-meaning simpletons.

Last season on the American television situation comedy which is carried on our own blessed CBC, Three's Company, one week the vapid blonde's father pays a surprise visit to his daughter: he turns out to be a Protestant clergyman of monumental gormlessness.

Many of you will remember that on the old Mary Tyler Moore Show—also made available to us by our own network—there was a priest Mary thought was falling in love with her. He was a most attractive man, wise, kind, personable, tolerant, and all that.

But the tennis-playing, confused young Protestant minister who officiated at the wedding of Ted and Georgette was merely an amiable twerp. (I wonder what Al Johnson, the president of the CBC thinks about this sort of thing: after all, his father was a United Church minister in Saskatchewan.)

In Robertson Davies' delightfully malicious novel, Leaven of Malice, there is a not-unattractive clergyman—and for such mercies, one ought to be grateful. But he suffered harassment from members of his congregation, which Davies indicates in this way:

"In every church, there are people who, for reasons which seem sufficient to them, do not approve of their pastor and seek to harry and bully him into some condition more pleasing to themselves. The democracy which the Reformation brought into the Christian church rages in their bosoms like a fire; they would deny that they regard their clergyman as their spiritual hired hand, whom they boss and oversee for his own good, but that certainly is the impression they give to observers."

(The setting for the novel is said to be Kingston, Ontario, where I served as a pastor for 10 years. I shudder to think that such attitudes could prevail there. However . . .)

I worry about the popular image of the Protestant minister as a rather inept person of narrow piety and open to bullying by a tyrannical congregation. It is, on the whole, an unrealistic and grossly unfair image. During my ministry, I have felt more harassed by this image than by anything I have had to take from congregations. But there seems to be nothing I can do about it. I wonder, though, if it would help if I were to grow a beard, buy some flashy clothes, and start going to discos.

Wilkinson United marking years

Wilkinson Road United Church extends an invitation to worship on Sunday at 11:15 a.m. when it will celebrate its 87th year as a congregation and the 65th anniversary of the present building.

The work of the Methodist Church in this district had its early beginning when Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Etheridge started a Sunday school in their home at Royal Oak in 1891.

Later the Sunday school moved to the Will Luscombe kitchen on Wilkinson Road where lay people such as Wellington R. Dowler, B.A., (Victoria city clerk 1890s-1915), Robert Clark and Leonard Tate served as preachers.

In 1889 the Methodist circuit consisted of Sidney, South Saanich and Royal Oak and was served by the first minister of whom we have knowledge, Rev. Irwins.

On Sunday, Sept. 30, 1894, Strawberry Vale Methodist Church was dedicated on a site on Wilkinson at Carey near the present building. When it was opened it was debt free.

On Nov. 1, 1894, the first annual meeting of Strawberry Vale Methodist Sunday School was held with Rev. Ashton in the chair. Since the Sunday school was a continuation of the former Sunday school there were minutes to be read which, in the Methodist tradition were called, The Discipline.

In 1901 Strawberry Vale was listed as a preaching point on centennial circuit plan. This included Centennial Church, The Jail (located where S. J. Willis School is today) and Oakland.

On Oct. 26, 1913 the present building was opened and dedicated and was then known as the new Strawberry Vale Methodist Church. Minister was Rev. Robert Wilkinson. The land was donated by Mrs. Charlie Jones of Glyn Farm. Architect and builder was Walter Houghton, assisted by young Robert Wilkinson. H. G. Warren was the carpenter and Fred Battick the forman.

Building's 65th year, congregation's 87th

In May, 1914, the name became Wilkinson Road Methodist Church.

In 1925 with Church union, it became Wilkinson Road United Church.

In September of 1978 the Colonist ran an article stating that Saanich Council was considering Wilkinson Road Church as a Heritage building.

Mrs. Ann Lockhart, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Sam Jones and who as a little girl attended the opening dedication of this church in 1913, is still an active member and worshiping at Wilkinson Road United Church.

Rev. Geoffrey Smith will be the guest speaker and Rev. Ernest MacQuarrie will read the lesson on Sunday morning.

A fellowship hour and lunch will be held in the church hall following the service.

Witnesses assembling in semi-annual circuit

Morning and afternoon sessions are being held today and Sunday at S. J. Willis School on Quadra.

The program is being developed around the theme Rendering Sacred Service with Loyalty and will feature discussions and interviews with individuals who have a long record of loyalty rendering sacred service to God.

However, the youth in the audience will not be ignored as extensive portions of the program will be devoted to how young people also have a share in displaying loyalty—a quality becoming increasingly hard to find in a self-seeking world.

Highlights include the water baptism today of newly dedicated servants of God. Sunday at 2 p.m. Richard Grant of Toronto carries the assembly into the public with an address entitled Meeting the Test of Christian Loyalty.

Discussing the practical aspects of the program, assembly overseer George Wilson of Victoria said the primary emphasis of the Witnesses' sacred service is on exercising faith.

"It involves activity", Wilson said, "a postive action toward doing Jehovah's will, not just some perfunctory ceremony or ritual.

"To be loyal in rendering sacred service implies that we lovingly attach to God, doing what He wills for us at any given time. Loyalty will keep us from giving up or being distracted, for any reason or by anything.

"Even if rendering sacred service brings sufferings such as a ban, or in divided households or when suffering abuse, we should still view it as a privilege," Wilson said.

Hope Lutheran hosting B.C. pastors

Hope Lutheran Church will host the pastors of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod of B.C. this coming week.

About 40 pastors will be present along with their wives. The congregation will house these pastors in their homes, and members will serve the meals at the church.

Sessions will start on Tuesday at 10 a.m. and will continue until Thursday noon.

Such papers as Gambling With Specific Reference to Lotteries, Seeking Unity in the Christian Church Through Confessions, Truth, Unity and Love, will be delivered along with a number of sessions of specific bible studies.

These conferences are held twice a year, once in the spring and the other in fall. They are always hosted by individual congregations and pastors are guests of the inviting congregation.

Christians in our Nation's Capital will be the sermon topic Sunday evening at Emmanuel Baptist Church.

Page is convinced that Christians should be vitally involved in the political issues of our great land.

More than $500,000 was collected by Victoria Seventh-day Adventists and fellow church members throughout North America this past week to support the church's worldwide radio ministry.

Communicatons secretary of the Victoria church, Kathleen Piper, said voluntary contributions provide about 12 per cent of the annual budget for the program, The Voice of Prophecy. The broadcast is heard more than 1,200 times a week on 800 stations. In the Victoria area The Voice is heard on radio daily and on Sundays.

"The broadcast began in the 1930s as a faith venture by a young Adventist pastor, H.M.S. Richards. He set up a makeshift radio studio in a renovated chicken coop in southern California," Mrs. Piper said.

Since then the broadcast has developed several different formats, including a series of public service spots on health and family problems. Another spot series, Inside Track, helps students choose a career. It has been recognized and endorsed by a nationally syndicated career-choice columnist.

Wayout, a youth ministry providing pamphlets on controversial and troubling topics for young people, is also promoted through spot announcements.

Dr. Synesio Lyra will visit Oak Bay United Church Oct. 28-9.

Lyra, of Garden Grove Community Church in California, will conduct a special seminar on the ministry of laity (that is each one of us in the church). Lyra is known internationally as a specialist in this field.

The morning and afternoon sessions will begin at 9:30 a.m. Oct. 28 in the church hall. It will be primarily to inspire and challenge the members and adherents of the church to be more aware of their individual potential for Christian service.

Charge for the seminar is $5, which includes a hot lunch. Reservations are requested; phone 598-5021.

There is still room for people in groups on awareness and growth starting at the citizen's counselling centre of Greater Victoria in Metropolitan United Church, Quadra and Pandora.

Groups will be held from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Thursdays for eight weeks starting the week of Oct. 30. Cost is $15 for eight sessions.

The Monday group will be led by Dr. Henk Blouw and will concentrate on personal growth and understanding. The Wednesday group, led by Lynn Balding and Ian Brown, will explore participants' awareness of themselves and their feelings, with emphasis on assertiveness.

The Thursday group, led by Anna Blouw, will examine various methods of awareness and growth.

Reservations may be made at the centre, 907 Pandora, weekdays from noon to 4 p.m. Phone 384-9934.

Sacred Heart Church, 4040 Nelthorpe, will hold a teen mass for ages 13-18 at 7:30 p.m. Sundays in the Pope John XXIII Room. For information phone 479-1611.

CHURCH CHRONICLES

Response to Anglicans' concern

Primate clarifies grants

The primate of the Anglican Church of Canada has taken positive action in response to the growing concern of members of his church about the World Council of Churches' grants to combat racism and its effects on people.

The concern is especially in relation to grants made by the WCC Special Fund to Combat Racism to groups such as the Patriotic Front in Zimbabwe (Rhodesia).

Archbishop E. W. Scott emphasized again that no general funds of the Anglican Church of Canada have been given to that special fund or, through it, to any such groups. He did say, however, that small donations to the special fund have been made by the Primate's World Relief and Development Fund.

The primate recognizes the deep concern of many individual Anglicans throughout Canada caused by the publicity being given to the grants, the possible misunderstanding of the true nature of the WCC program, and the obvious distress being expressed to him and the other leaders of the church.

Scott, after consultation with officers of General Synod, has requested that a full and open discussion of this issue be held in the upcoming meetings of the national executive council of the Anglican Church of Canada.

All members of the NEC are being informed that this discussion, which will be open to the media, will take place at 9:30 a.m. on Thursday, Nov. 2, during their meetings at the Queen of Apostles Conference Centre in Mississauga.

Bombers, Stamps seek second place but Lions just want to remain alive

Winnipeg Blue Bombers and Calgary Stampeders travel to different cities this weekend, but both will be working toward the same end—the home team playoff advantage that accrues from occupying second place in the Canadian Football League's Western Conference.

Sunday's CFL games will both be telecast. The Calgary at Hamilton contest starts at 11 a.m. on channels 2 and 6 while the Winnipeg at Saskatchewan encounter follows at 2 p.m. on channel 8.

Meanwhile, B.C. Lions aren't concerned with home advantage, second place or anything else, except sheer survival. Only the slimmest mathematical chance remains in their favor. Unless a minor miracle develops, the Lions are doomed to miss the playoffs.

Bombers will be in Regina for their final showdown of the year with Saskatchewan Roughriders while the Stampeders—who need another point to nail down third spot—will be in Hamilton to play the Eastern Conference Tiger-Cats. Both games will be played Sunday.

Winnipeg is just one point ahead of the third-place Stampeders, and this weekend's games are a prelude to a home-and-home series between the two clubs to wind up their regular season.

Edmonton Eskimos, who don't play this weekend, have assured themselves of a first-place finish in the west.

On Saturday, Toronto Argonauts will be playing the Alouettes in Montreal and Ottawa Roughriders go to B. C. to play the Lions.

The Lions are in a near-impossible situation. They must win all three of their remaining games and the Stamps must lose their three, if B.C. is to make it to post-season. A tie goes in favor of the Stamps.

To improve their chances, Lions Friday activated import receiver Leon Bright and Canadian defensive back Doug Carlson for tonight's game.

Bright, the CFL's top rookie a year ago, missed the last B.C. game because of a leg injury. He will start at wide receiver, with Ricky Ellis moving to tight end in place of Harry Holt, who was dropped from the roster.

Carlson will serve as a backup in the secondary, which now has five imports in the starting lineup. Canadian Hal Lund was dropped to make room for Carlson, who underwent knee surgery about two months ago.

Bombers will be facing a different lineup from the one they defeated 31-29 on Labor Day.

Back in the lineup are receivers Steve Mazurak and Joey Walters who, along with Freeman Johns provide the Riders with three deep threats.

Meanwhile, the Stampeders aren't taking for granted their confrontation with Hamilton.

The Tiger-Cats, with nine points, are just one point ahead of the cellar-dwelling Argonauts, while Montreal appears likely to end up in second place and Ottawa seems destined to finish first in the east.

"They're a tough club and they're healthy," said head coach Jack Gotta.

Calgary will be playing without quarterback John Hufnagel, who injured his throwing hand in Sunday's win over Saskatchewan, and will start with rookie Ken Johnson, a late cut from Buffalo Bills of the National Football League.

Alexandra leads ladies tournament

CROSBY, Tex. (AP) — New Mexico golfer Alexandra Reinhardt fired a course-record 64, eight under par, Friday to grab a six-stroke lead after the first round of the $50,000 Houston golf tournament.

Reinhardt blistered the 6,220-yard, par-72 Newport Country Club course with birdies on eight of the first 13 holes and a final round that tied the low 18-hole score on the tour this year.

The eight birdies was one off the LPGA record.

Defending champion Amy Alcott, Jerilyn Britz, Patty Hayes and Donna Caponi Young are tied for second with two-under-par 70s.

Seven golfers tied for third place with 71s, and another six had 72s. The 54-hole tournament continues through Sunday.

Yanks on Rose list

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Rose, who is free to play with the team of his choice after the Nov. 3 baseball free-agent draft, announced Friday he has trimmed his prospective list to eight clubs, including the world champion New York Yankees, but didn't rule out signing with Cincinnati Reds.

Rose named the eight teams in a release, saying: "There are only certain teams on which my full worth would be realized."

In addition to the Yankees, Rose named the National League champion Los Angeles Dodgers, Philadelphia Phillies, San Diego Padres, Boston Red Sox, California Angels, Kansas City Royals and Texas Rangers.

Hal may take hike

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Hal McRae, who came within a percentage point of winning the American League batting title three years ago, says he's ready to follow Charlie Lau, dismissed coach of Kansas City Royals.

McRae said in a telephone interview from his home in Bradenton, Fla., Thursday that the dismissal of the batting instructor was a bad move "and I don't like it."

"Right now, I don't care if I come back to Kansas City or not," said the Royals' designated hitter.

Cross-country racing Sunday

Victoria Mercuries' annual age-class cross-country championships are scheduled for Sunday, 1 p.m. at Beacon Hill Park. Classes range from tyke boys and peewee girls to open men and women.

For further information, telephone Katherine Ellis 477-4366.

Sleight of hand saves money

Casseroles more popular

Casseroles are gaining in popularity and respectability. In fact, they are almost a necessity. How else could you make a can of salmon or two cups of diced cooked chicken into a dinner for six?

To accomplish this sleight of hand, some inexpensive and economical foods need to be combined with the more expensive meat or seafood.

Rice, at about three cents per half cup serving, is the number one casserole-maker.

Next come eggs, onions, seasonings. Then you may need to add a more expensive ingredient like cheese, sour cream or bacon to add flavor and richness and make the whole thing work.

The combinations are endless, but here are two recipes for rice casseroles that are especially good. Once you've tried them, your family is sure to ask for them again.

CREAMED SALMON AU GRATIN

6 slices bacon, finely chopped
1 can (10¾ oz.) condensed cream of chicken soup
1 tablespoon lemon juice
¼ teaspoon Tabasco pepper sauce
1 can (16 oz.) pink salmon (drain, reserve liquid, remove bones and flake
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
3 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
3 cups hot cooked rice
½ cup soft bread crumbs
Paprika

Cook bacon until crisp. Remove from pan and drain on absorbent paper. Heat soup in 1 tablespoon Bacon drippings. Add lemon juice, pepper sauce, liquid from salmon, and parsley. Cook 2 to 3 minutes. Add salmon and eggs. Heat thoroughly. Spoon rice into a buttered 2-quart cassrole. Pour salmon mixture over rice. Sprinkle with bread crumbs, bacon, and paprika. Brown under broiler watching carefully to prevent burning. Makes 6 servings.

CORONADO CASSEROLE

1 can (15 oz.) tomato sauce
1 cup chicken broth
1 cup finely chopped onions
1 can (4 oz.) diced green chiles
2 teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon ground cumin
½ teaspoon oregano
2 cups boned cooked chicken (large pieces)
3 cups cooked rice
1 cup sour cream
2 cups grated Cheddar cheese
1½ cups corn chips

Combine tomato sauce, broth, ¾ cup onions, the green chiles, and seasonings. Cook over low heat about 10 minutes. Add chicken. Stir together rice and sour cream. Spoon into a shallow 2-quart casserole. Sprinkle with 1 cup cheese; pour sauce over all. Top with remaining cheese and onions; sprinkle with corn chips. Bake at 350 degrees for 25 minutes. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Weather sparks weekend events

By MARILYN McCALL

Glorious autumn weather continues to accentuate Victoria's weekend horse events. Sherwood Creek Farm hosted a hunter-jumper and cross-country events day on Saturday. Dawn Ruthven judged the day's events, with Nina Rougier taking the aggregate. Riding Irish Eyes, Nina placed first in open working hunter, handy hunter trials, and was a member of the winning team in both team hunter and team hunter trials. The other two members of the team were Marianne Bradash, riding Blizzard, and Jenny Pipes, riding Dusty.

Jill Yonge and Tristan won both Sherwood Creek Farm's jumper stake and open hunter trials. Green hunter trials were won by Rachel Twine on Kleewyck. In novice hunter, Jenny Pipes and Dusty were first. Janice Gill and Smackwater Jack won warm-up hunter.

Beaver Lake was the scene of the Garden City Horsemen's Club's annual competition trail ride. Approximately 70 riders competed in the two categories.

Horse Happenings

Darryl Horner and Little Brown Jug won the junior division, and Joanne Park rode Little Britches to second. Nancy Malcolm and Brandy were third, and Jenny Kjargaard and Sleepy were fourth. There was a tie for fifth between Joy Thomas, on Gwen Bar Honey, and Frances Widdowson, on Honda. Sixth was also a tie, between Rita Turnbull on Grey Boy and Hope Irvin on Teddy Lee One.

Jim Bissenden and Paymaster won the senior division. Second went to Joan Cringan and Grouchy Abe, and Lori Taylor rode Wahna Toke to third. Fourth went to Trudy Lowrey, riding Cougar. Dunc Rimmer, riding Cananea Sun was fifth, and Sandra Schwartz, riding Sanna, was sixth.

A jackpot barrel race was held during a slack period of time, which was won by Nancy McMinn. It should be mentioned, however, that Jim Bissenden beat approximately 16 horses with his run around the barrels — what makes Jim's feat noteworthy, is that he was on foot!

CADORA's Schooling Dressage Show was judged by Joy Longley of Vancouver. In preliminary G junior (14 years and under), Joy Thomas and Gwen Bar Honey were first. Second to sixth were as follows: Marnie Gee on Tisket; Joel Bohnet on Captain Crunch; Jane King on Shillelagh Irish; Nicola Hives on Mara and Frances Widdowson on Honda. Gail Jewsbury and Hope's Alley Cat won preliminary senior. Second to sixth were as follows: Jill Yates on Snookey; Lois Nixon on Arigato; Cathy Jawl on Bascar; Margaret Symes on Imarr; and Karen Rougier on Irish Eyes.

Jane King and Shillelagh Irish won dressage seat for juniors. Joy Thomas was second; Nicola Hives was third; Marnie Gee was fourth; Kirstin Harkness, riding Tic Toc, and Joel Bohnet tied for fifth; and Frances Widdowson and Rachel Twine, riding Freelancer, tied for sixth. Dressage seat was won by Elizabeth Holmes, riding Paddy Grant, in the senior division. Joan Cringan and Grouchy Abe were second; Lois Nixon was third; Karen Rougier was fourth; Helen Cant and Tall Ship were fifth; and Sheila Skene and Almost George were sixth. Cathy Jawl won novice N. Second went to Joy Thomas; Jill Yates and Lois Nixon tied for third; Ann Caldwell was fifth; Karen Rougier was sixth. Elizabeth Holmes won the elementary O. Ann Caldwell was second; Sheila Skene was third; Ann Wood, riding Cornishman was fourth; and Jennifer Miller, riding Entry, was fifth. Ann Wood and Cornishman won the medium I test.

An error was made in reporting the results of Sherwood Creek Farm's September 30 schooling show. Catherine Widdowson and Zodiac were reported as winners of the green working hunter class, a class in which they were not even entered. Sonya Young and Sherry were the winners.

Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have noticed a bad odor from my nose and mouth. My doctor tells me I have atrophic rhinitis. He said there is no cure and he cannot help me. It was suggested that I use a salt solution in my nose and steam it. This does not help. He also mentioned that it can be a glandular condition. I am desperate. Can you offer any help? — Mrs. D.R.

Atrophic rhinitis is a shrinking and drying of the nasal membranes. We're not sure why it occurs, but often bacterial infection is a part of it. There is usually encrustation and disturbance of the nasal pathway. This leads to the foul odor. It is difficult to treat, especially in winter with the indoor dryness adding to the problem. Sinuses may become involved.

Antibiotics in petroleum gel inserted into the nose help reduce the crusting and eliminate the odor. In some, vitamin therapy can help when a deficiency can be established. Sometimes closing off the nostrils with a bit of lamb's wool avoids the drying efffect of air passing over the membranes and helps. Estrogens can be tried, both as an application or orally, if glandular problems are suspected. A rhinologist might offer other suggestions.

Dear Dr. Thostesen: What is the rule on use of towels in a house where a teenager has acne? Can it spread? — Mrs. T.

The youngster with acne should use fresh clean towels, especially if the acne blebs are running. The material can cause it to spread elsewhere on her face. But acne is not transferred from one person to another.

ann landers

Dear Ann Landers: From time to time people complain to you about being tyrannized by telephone freaks who keep tied up endlessly just because they want to talk and have nothing better to do. I've found a solution I'd like to share with your readers. Here it is:

First, psych yourself out so you won't feel guilty. Remember, phone-a-holics always have a mess of problems and no matter how long you listen, it's never long enough. Remember, too, that anything worth saying gets said within the first ten minutes.

The minute you get a call "one of those," set it for 15 minutes. At the sound of the bell say, "Did you hear the alarm? We've been talking 15 minutes and that's my limit. I must go now."

Solution: Put an alarm clock by the phone. The minute you get a call from "one of those," set it for 15 minutes. At the sound of the bell say, "Did you hear the alarm? We've been talking 15 minutes and that's my limit. I must go now."

P.S.: Not one person has ever got so mad at me that he or she didn't call back in a day or two.—No More Ea. Bunions.

Dear Bun: I'm in favor of doing whatever is necessary to protect against the phone-prone. Congratulations on being saved by the bell.

Dear Ann: This is for "Frying In Freeport," the woman who is mad at her husband because she bought paints, brushes, dropcloths, the whole bit—and everything is still sitting. Including her.

Why didn't you tell the dame to get off her rear and paint the rooms herself? With all this wonderful latex paints and rollers, it's very simple. If she does one a day it can be a snap. Tell her to buy plastic covering (very inexpensive) to cover carpets, floors and furniture. Also some cheap rubber gloves.

I have a terrific husband but he just hates to paint. So I do it. I'll bet if you polled your readers you'd find an awful lot of women do the painting in the family.—Not Rembrandt But Good Enough.

Dear Good: I don't need to poll my readers. I know what they think. I've received hundreds of letters from women telling me they do all the painting and what's more, they like it. Best of all, it eliminates family fights. Thanks, girls.

Food expert calls for aid

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Canadian-born head of the World Food Council, has called for more aid to the world's developing countries, saying demand for food is increasing faster than production.

Maurice Williams, who took over as executive director of the Rome-based council Sept. 1, urged the UN General Assembly on Friday to permanently establish the emergency grain reserve created at a 1975 special session.

Addressing the assembly's economic committee, he said contributions to the reserve have almost reached the 500,000-ton target set when it was created to enable the World Food Program to meet food crises.

In 1977, developing countries imported 52 million tons of grain, but are likely to need 145 million tons annually by 1990, he said.

Studies by the Food and Agriculture Organization in Rome show "that per capita food production in all regions except Asia is less than it was two years ago," he said.

Climbers reach base of Nelson's statute

Protest falls from on high

LONDON (UPI) — Two men protesting foreign investment in South Africa climbed the 153-foot Nelson's column in central London's Trafalgar Square Friday and tied a protest banner to the statue of Britain's most famous admiral.

Thousands of commuters gathered in the square below to watch the drama atop the sheer granite column, snarling rush hour traffic.

Before descending to the ground five hours after the start of their climb, the men attached to the statue of Admiral Lord Nelson a streaming white banner with the slogan in red letters:

"Barclays profits from apartheid's coffins."

They also dropped a typed message in an airmail envelop explaining that they had chosen the British Barclays Bank International as an example of foreign companies that invest in South Africa "against the expressed wishes of the vast majority of the South African people."

Foreign companies have an estimated $20 billion in investments and loans in the white-ruled republic.

Police took the men in for questioning when they returned to the ground and did not disclose their names.

The typed message said the climb was designed to draw world attention to demonstrations in London "and other European capitals" today to mark "the International Anti-Apartheid Year 1978."

The climb took place on the eve of the 173rd anniversary of the Battle of Trafalgar, which was fought on Oct. 21, 1805.

Trafalgar Square has been a frequent site of anti-apartheid demonstrations because South Africa House, which contains the South African Embassy, flanks one side of the square.

Long-term care plan rated flop

The provincial government's long-term care program has had no effect on excess utilization of acute-care hospital beds by patients who really need long-term care, deputy regional health officer Brian Allen maintains.

In a letter to Dr. Douglas Critchley, former president of the Victoria Medical Society, Allen responded to remarks by Critchley quoted in the Colonist in which Critchley fingered the long-term care program as one of the factors responsible for the fact that more than 160 (the number has since risen to nearly 200) of Royal Jubilee Hospital's acute-care beds are occupied by people who do not require acute care but have no alternative facilities to go to because of the shortage of long-term care beds.

"The long-term care program has neither increased nor decreased the number of beds available for long-term care," Allen said, observing that the rapid influx of retired people into the area with the development of high-rise buildings, the rise in land values which persuaded many rest home operators to sell their property to developers for apartments and condominiums, and the development of standards and regulations for intermediate-care facilities all contributed to a long-standing shortage of personal and intermediate care facilities in the region.

Until the development of the long-term care program, and of more accurate data on the needs of the area, the severity of the shortage was not known, Allen said. Within the next two years, an additional 530 personal and intermediate care beds should be operating in the region, with an additional 150 beds at Glengarry Hospital.

To say the program's low co-insurance fee of $6.50 has persuaded people to end up in acute-care hospitals is "sheer speculation," Allen said.

"Before the long-term care program, it was cheaper to stay in an acute hospital bed at $4.50 a day than go to an expensive unsubsidized nursing home."

Since the long-term care program began, more than 2,700 people have received homemaker services with full or partial financial aid, Allen said. Currently, about 1,000 people in the region, some of whom would probably have been hospitalized otherwise, are receiving the service.

Agreeing that there is a severe shortage of long-term care beds which has caused serious problems for the acute-care hospitals, Allen said the long-term care program will help to solve the problem, rather than make it worse.

"Rather than aggravating the situation, the long-term care program is giving the impetus to non-profit societies and others to provide more long-term care facilities, and through its homemaker program is already saving many acute hospital bed-days."

THE ACES® ON BRIDGE

by IRA G. CORN JR.
TEAM CAPTAIN

"We live in a world that has narrowed into a neighborhood before it has broadened into a brotherhood." – Lyndon B. Johnson.

The 1978 World Bridge Olympiad was held in New Orleans in June and was a stunning success. A new team format created much excitement and suspense and, for the first time ever, a Communist country won the Julius Rosenblum Open Teams title. Poland defeated Brazil decisively in a hard-fought final match, 165-80 IMPS. Today's hand features a gain by the Polish team via a trump en passant play.

Looking at all four hands, there appear to be five apparent losers – two spades, two hearts and a club. Here's how the Polish declarer made one of them disappear.

The heart king and ace were cashed by the defense and East shifted to the spade eight, West capturing declarer's king with his ace. The spade jack knocked out declarer's queen and declarer cashed his ace and king of trumps to bring the bad news.

A diamond was led to dummy's ace, the club queen was cashed and dummy cashed two more top diamonds, declarer discarding a spade. At trick 11, dummy's last diamond was ruffed as West followed suit and declarer's last heart was led.

West was helpless as he couldn't keep dummy from making his last trump "en passant" and five losers had been compressed into only four. Declarer made his three-club contract for a score of 110 points.

Opening lead: King of hearts.

In the replay, the Brazilians reached a hopeless game in no trump (East didn't overcall) and the Polish defenders rattled off the first six hearts and the spade ace to gain another 150 points on the deal.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Provincial court

A Canadian Armed Forces seaman received fines totalling $1,425 after pleading guilty in Victoria provincial court Friday to three counts of not having a valid driver's licence and two counts each of impaired driving and driving without valid insurance.

Jean Claude Falardeau, 22, of HMCS Yukon, was given the fines by Judge William Ostler after entering the guilty pleas to seven of eight counts.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan told the court there were three separate incidents leading to the charges.

The first incident arose May 19, Mulligan said, when Falardeau was stopped on a motorcycle and checked in the 600-block Johnson at about 1:20 a.m. Mulligan said the seaman produced a Nova Scotia driver's licence which had expired slightly more than a month earlier and that the insurance on the bike also expired April 12.

On June 29, Falardeau was stopped at 3:45 p.m. at Fort and Douglas and was again charged with driving without a valid driver's licence and insurance.

The final incident occurred Sept. 29, Mulligan said, when Falardeau was spotted speeding east on Highway 1A near Colwood about 10:20 p.m. Colwood RCMP stopped him, took him back to the detachment where breath test readings of .24 and .22 were obtained, and released him on an appearance notice after warning him to leave his motorcycle where it was.

Not long after, Mulligan informed Ostler, Falardeau was stopped again, this time heading east on Highway 1A on his motorcycle.

Ostler, who called Falardeau's action stubborn defiance of the law, fined him $50, $100, and $300 for not having a valid driver's licence, $250 (the minimum) and $300 for driving without valid insurance, and $500 and $300 for the drinking-driving offences.

Ostler said the second drinking-driving fine was smaller because he considered it a continuing offence and Falardeau might have been confused owing to the high readings.

Frederick Leroy Hodel was charged in connection with the Aug. 30 break-in at a human resources ministry district office at 1820 Blanshard during which approximately $70,000 in welfare cheques was allegedly stolen.

Hodel was denied bail Sept. 8 and defence lawyer James Main elected trial by judge without jury on that date.

A 42-year-old man who shoplifted at two widely-separated stores Thursday was given 30-day concurrent sentences by Ostler.

Herbert James Harris, 2850 Dysart, pleaded guilty to two counts of theft under $200.

Mulligan said Harris stole a $65 sweater from the Mr. Big 'N Tall Shop, 614 Johnson, and shoplifted a tool box, tools and a thermos valued at $96.96 from Woodward's later the same day.

Harris said he took pain-killers that day for an injured hand and didn't remember "a thing" until he was in jail.

Mulligan said Harris had a lengthy criminal record dating to July 25, 1955 in Calgary when he was sentenced to six months in jail for breaking and entering.

He was fined March 25, 1977 for false pretences and received a six-month jail term Dec. 23, 1977 for nine counts of the same charge.

Ostler also placed Harris on six months' probation and ordered him to take any Drug and Alcohol Rehabilitation Society counselling as directed by his probation officer.

A 31-year-old Nanaimo pharmacist was denied a conditional discharge by Judge Fred Green, who imposed a $150 fine for common assault.

Keith Wright Edwards was found guilty following a trial Friday but was acquitted by Green on a second charge of causing a disturbance by shouting.

The charges arose from an incident July 8 at the Sidney Hotel liquor lounge during which, bartender Penny Du Temple testified, a beer glass was thrown "inches" from her, shattering in the bar area. The action followed a refusal to serve Edwards any more drinks.

Defence counsel Bruce McConnan said his client had emotional problems over the health of his common-law wife that night, and asked for a conditional discharge because Edwards might lose his job if his employer found out about the conviction.

Fined for drinking-driving were Ina Agnes Sinclair, 50, of 1243 Park Terrace, $500; Eric Wayne Bentley, 21, of Port Hardy, $500; Merna Edna Kidd, 25, of 1325 May, $400; and John Monahan Devlin, 50, of no fixed address, $50.

In addition, Bentley was fined another $500 for driving while suspended and Devlin was placed on one year's probation and ordered to attend DARS counselling.

Drink-drive fine for B.C. official

An official of the attorney-general's ministry was fined $450 in Victoria provincial court Friday after changing his plea on a charge of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 April 7.

Gregory Keith Muirhead, 31, of 613 Foul Bay, is a research officer working with data systems in the corrections branch.

Crown counsel N.K. Varma told Judge William Ostler that Muirhead was spotted by Victoria city police at about 12:45 a.m. speeding in the 1100-block Hillside.

Varma said a chase ensued before Muirhead was finally stopped and arrested.

Walking time mushroomed

Psychedelic mushrooms were blamed Friday by a young Jordan River Camp prisoner for his being absent without leave just over a year ago.

In Victoria county court, Gregory Paul Huebner, 18, pleaded guilty to being unlawfully at large last Oct. 8 from the camp where he was serving six months definite and six months indeterminate for theft, breaking, entering and theft, and breach of probation.

Judge Leslie Cashman imposed a sentence of one day, the same as given previously to Huebner's companion in another court.

The crown said Huebner had permission to walk the evening of Oct. 7 to a gravel pit area within the camp, but failed to return when due.

Huebner said he and his companion found and ate 80 psychedelic mushrooms, and all he could remember for the rest of the night was wandering on a mountainside in freezing cold.

The two were picked up next morning by a correction officer on the Jordan River road about four miles away where they were hitching back to camp.

"It boils down to a stupid act," Cashman said.

Three men granted appeals by judge

Appeals by three men convicted in provincial court were granted in judgments of the Victoria county court this week.

Judge Richard Low quashed the conviction of Royce William Johnson, address unknown, and ordered his $400 fine for impaired driving to be returned.

Judge E.J.C. Stewart allowed the appeal of Daniel Thomas MacDonald, of Victoria, fined $200 when convicted of assault causing bodily harm in July, 1977.

Kenneth Nelson Williams of Surrey successfully appealed conviction for impaired driving for which he was sentenced to seven days in jail.

A document of diversity —Lougheed

EDMONTON (CP)—Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed released a paper this week on constitutional demands, arguing for "harmony in diversity," and abruptly predicted the document would further abrade relations between the federal and provincial governments.

"Regrettably, it's a confrontation document, I suppose," Lougheed told a news conference.

The paper, which emphasizes control of resources and changes to the Supreme Court as the most important goals for constitutional change, is to be debated in the Alberta legislature before a first ministers' constitutional conference Oct. 31.

Essentially, the document is a compendium of positions already stated by Alberta and other provincial governments in nearly a decade of attempting to agree on ways to alter the British North America Act, Canada's basic charter.

But the 29-point brief, entitled Harmony in Diversity: A New Federalism for Canada, lists in a straightforward manner proposals that would strip the federal government of much of the jurisdiction it now holds over areas such as indirect taxation, inter-provincial trade and certain aspects of resource control.

Lougheed said he expected a "fair measure" of agreement from other provinces, but added that the federal Liberal government was not likely to find many areas of the document that accorded with its views.

A major proposal outlines in detail a way in which a "constitutional court" could be established to resolve differing views on prospective changes to the constitution.

Lougheed has been pressing for establishment of such a court with the argument that the Supreme Court of Canada, into whose jurisdiction such disputes would now likely fall, is biased in favor of central Canada.

The constitutional court of seven judges would be chosen "at random" from a panel of about 40 superior court judges nominated by the provinces. Each province would first nominate more than the number of judges necessary from the province to join the 40-member panel, then Ottawa would choose the 40 panel members from those nominated.

Lougheed, however, said some of the proposals could change in negotiations with the other provinces and Ottawa. He added that the constitutional court proposal could be one Alberta would modify in the hope of gaining in other areas.

Among the prerequisites for change is a stipulation that all the provinces and the federal government would have to agree to any constitutional amendments.

Asked what conditions, political or otherwise, might lead to federal agreement to Alberta's proposals, Lougheed replied, "I don't know the answer to that. I don't like to put it in political terms."

The 20-page document says recent supreme court decisions have placed in question the degree of control which provinces have over their natural resources.

It also argues in favor of provincial jurisdiction over offshore resources, a question currently in dispute after recent discoveries of natural gas fields off the coast of Newfoundland.

As well as listing areas in which the provinces should have their jurisdiction clarified, the document mentions areas now considered the sole responsibility of Ottawa which both levels of government should control. Some, such as culture and fisheries, would have provincial "paramountcy."

Also, the Alberta position argues in favor of increased provincial independence in international trade, notably with the United States.

With regard to the questions of interprovincial trade and indirect and direct taxing, the document terms changes in those areas as "strengthening" existing provincial rights.

The supreme court has used those federal powers as the basis for recent rulings against the New Democratic Party government of Saskatchewan in potash pro-rationing and taxation of the oil industry.

SLIM PICKENS: I've been accused of being an actor but nobody ever proved it, I'm a cowboy.

The Reel West Looks Behind Movie Screen

Reel West, a fascinating look behind the movie screen, airs on Public TV 9 Saturday, Oct. 21, at 10:30 p.m. (rebroadcast Tuesday, Oct. 24, at 9 p.m.). Combining old western movies and modern small format video interviews, the program features actors CLint Eastwood, Peter Fonda, Iron Eyes Cody, Warren Oates, Ben Johnson, Slim Pickens, Margot Kidder and Tim McCoy, as well as directors King Vidor, Delner Daves, Howard Hawks, and Henry King.

These actors and directors gathered in Sun Valley, Idaho from June 29 - July 4 1976 to discuss the myths and images of the western movies. Using small format video, thr Reel West crew captured their conversations, their opinions, and their memories.

First, the western experts consider "the law of the West" — a law usually epitomized by tough marshals, and heroic actions. Eastwood and Warren Oates believe that violence was part of the west, because "the mission to civilize itself promotes violence." All agree that such "legal violence" usually was idealized on the screen. The hero always was strong, in the John Wayne mold. King Vidor feels that "since none of us really are strong, John Wayne stands for a chance for a dream to come true." Eastwood notes that the "High Noon" variety of the shootout also is part of a dream, part of fiction: in real life, shootings usually took place when one man was not looking.

Reel West then returns to the ranch, the world of the real life cowboy. Although some directors insist that the westerns are authentic, the ranchers of Carey, Idaho tend to disagree. They judge a cowboy by "how he rides a horse, how he sits in the saddle"; and few movie heroes live up to their measurement. Despite the distance between the world of the movie cowboy and the world of the ranchhand, several actors manage to bridge that gap. Ben Johnson and Slim Pickens insist that they are real cowboys — who happen to make their living as actors. As Pickens comments: "I've been accused of being an actor but nobody ever proved it. I'm a cowboy."

Looking back at the heyday of westerns, mamy viewers note a disturbing treatment of the Indian. Most western movies spread the gospel that the "only good Indian is a dead Indian," Historian and author Vine deLoria, Jr. believes that the industry created the Indian as villsin without ever "facing the facts of what the media really does to the people who work in it and view it." Indian activist Phil Lucas, a member of the United Indians of All Tribes, considers himself such a victim. In a poignant moment he recalls: "I was twelve years old when it dawned on me that I was cheering for my own people to be killed."

Each weatern bears the mark of a director — a man whose vision has informed the movie. Reel West talks

Pothunters Hit Arizona

The daily destruction of Arizona's archaeological resources by "pothunters," persons who dig up ancient Indian ruins in search of artifacts to sell or collect, is the subject of Thieves of Time, airing Tuesday, Oct. 24 at 11:30 p.m. on Channel 9.

Taped on location throughout Arizona, Thieves of Time points out that there are both state and federal laws against pot-hunting on public lands. However, because of the vastness of Arizona's open spaces, very few of the state's more than 30,000 archaeological sites are adequately protected and patrolled.

The program demonstrates that the destruction of these sites prevents archaeologists from gaining a knowledge of our past — a past that is every citizen's heritage. If the current pace of illegal digging continues, there will be no more intact sites left in the state within a generation.

Kristy McNichol

"Acting's Fun, but also Hard Work"

By DICK MAURICE

George Bernard Shaw once suggested that "youth was wasted on the young." He might never have made that statement if he had the opportunity to meet Kristy Mc Nichol. For as a young lady, she has not wasted her youth in any endeavor she has pursued.

Kristy, co-starring as Buddy, the bright, restless youngest member of the Lawrence family in the ABC-TV series "Family," was born Sept. 9, 1963, in Los Angeles, Calif. She began her professional career at six, first in commercials and then as a juvenile dramatic actress.

Maurice: Is acting fun?

McNichol: Acting is fun, but sometimes it's hard work. You usually have to get up early in the morning, and go to bed early at night so you're ready for the next day.

But I like the challenge. It makes me feel great. I feel I'm doing something good and constructive with my life.

Lots of people tell me that playing yourself on screen is the hardest kind of acting there is, but I don't agree. It's the easiest for me.

Maurice: How would you define love?

McNichol: Love is when you care about someone so much that they become No. 1 in your life. There are several kinds of love: there is the kind that you feel for your family and there is the kind of love that you share with a boy.

Maurice: Has your life changed with all your success?

McNichol: I have very litle privacy now. Everywhere I go, people come up to me. We can't even go to the movies without being recognized — and going to the movies is one of the most important things in my life.

I'm always polite because I've been taught to be kind to people, no matter what. When you do lose your cool, people start awful rumors. Besides, I believe in being nice to people!

Maurice: Is it true that little girls are made of sugar and spice and everything nice?

McNichol: Gee, I hope not! I'm a practical joker and I love it. I like to play jokes on everybody.

Maurice: How do your brothers react to your being an actress?

McNichol: Well, I'll let you in on a little secret. I've never told anyone this before. My younger brother plays my stunt double because he looks so much like me. They put a

JOHN AND JANET FOSTER are hosts for a CBC series of 13 one-hour programs (to be telecast at irregular intervals) showing the splendours of the world's second largest country — an adventure by canoe, helicopter, and on foot to the remote corners of Canada in every season, with spectacular sequence of the varied wildlife inhabiting this land.

Multi-cultural Music on CBC

Exotic musical instruments, East Indian raga music, Polish legends and Cuban rhumbas are some of the varied and intriguing subjects to be explored this season on CBC Radio's multi-cultural music series, Identities. Hosted by broadcaster Margaret Pacsu, Identities is heard each Sunday at 6:05 p.m. on the AM Network.

On Sunday, October 22, Identities presents a special program on exotic homemade instruments gathered from around the world. Included in the unusual list of instruments is a steel oil drum from Jamaica, a one-stringed violin from Sweden, a flute cut from a water plant found in the Jordan River, and a fish scale from Roumania.

The following week, Identities will feature the music of East India with examples of both traditional and modern Raga music. (A Raga is an improvisational form of Eastern music using a fixed scale of notes). The program will visit East Indian communities in Vancouver, Toronto and Montreal to discover how each group is working to preserve their heritage and traditions. There will also be a report on the East Indian film industry in Canada and a look at a popular new form of jazz utilizing the raga.

On November 5, Latin performer Memo Acevedo and his Orchestra perform music from Cuba including the rhumba, the cha-cha, the bolero, the guaguanco, the charanga and the guagira.

The November 12 edition of Identities marks Remembrance Day with a program of music from the war years featuring hit parade favorites from Italy, Britain, France, Germany, Russia, Canada and the U.S. Listeners will also hear soldiers and civilians from the Axis and Allied countries talking about their memories of VE Day.

The following week, Margaret Pacsu hosts a program of stories and music from Poland with a live performance by the Kujawiacy Singers of Toronto. The program will also feature a 400-year-old Polish folk tale entitled "The Trumpeter of Cracow" presented in both its original and modern forms.

Elvis Worth More Dead

LAS VEGAS — While the world-wide Elvis Presley convention was anything but a huge success, it's a fact that Presley was the number one top drawing attraction at the Las Vegas Hilton. And it's another fact that Presley is worth more dead than alive.

PAPER CHASE TRAPS GINTY

By NANCY ANDERSON

HOLLYWOOD — When Robert Ginty went into "Baa Baa, Blacksheep," his friend Henry Winkler sent a telegram accusing him of being a sado-masochist. He meant that Ginty had let himself in for a rough time because of the show's poor time slot.

And now Ginty's done it again, signed on for a series that's tucked into a tight corner.

This time around he's a regular in "The Paper Chase", a high quality CBS show which has the misfortune of being against "LaVerne and Shirley."

Robert, however, won't admit to discouragement.

"I've absolutely no reservations about the series," he declares. "It has the same quality as 'Family' and 'M-A-S-H' in that it's an ensemble show and not one built around a single star."

Ginty ardently admires Bob Conrad and predicts that when people see him in "Centenniel" they will be impressed by what a fine actor he is. But he wasn't crushed by "Blacksheep's" cancellation, because he doesn't want to play one role for too long a time on television.

"I've tried to keep away from becoming an identifiable type on TV," Bob explains. "I don't like a feeling of entrapment, because I want to be in this business when I'm 70, and to do that, I'll have to prove that I'm versatile."

Ginty's movie credits include "Coming Home," with Jane Fonda and John Voigt; "Two Minute Warning" and "Bound For Glory," a flick which failed for reasons Bob's willing to pinpoint even at the risk of being tactless about another actor.

"In the first place," he says, "'Bound For Glory' was too long, and in the second place the public just didn't grab onto David Carradin as a star."

Sally Kellerman, the sexpot of the movie "M-A-S-H", says she has no qualms about playing the mother of the romantic lead in "A Little Romance," because "I am a mother."

And besides the romance in her new film, currently in production in Europe, isn't between adults but between two 13-year-olds.

Sultry-voiced Sally was squatting on a step in the apartment of an American in Paris as she explaind why she'd dropped out of acting for a time and why she's not only willing but pleased to be playing the mother of a teenage daughter in Orion Picture Company's new film directed by George Roy Hill.

She was a singer before she was an actress, Kellerman pointed out, so, after her plunge into movies, she cut an album.

"After that," she said, "I made a couple of flop movies so that I could sing a song.

"Then I said, 'Wait a minute. Making movies just so I can sing isn't going to do me any good.'

"I'd better separate these two things and get out and learn how to sing and then come back and develop the other.

"I had to learn one thing at a time, so I started turning down pictures to go on the road as a singer — to make this full commitment.

"I'm writing an album now, probably for Casa Blanca, because my musical director who's been on the road with me, is under contract to the company.

"It was a humbling experience being on the road, you know, no meals, flying all the guys, paying for their tickets and their hotel rooms, and repairing their guitars.

"I started out singing, I turned to acting, but I never wanted to have one without the other.

"But I was so crazy when I was young, and singing you had to do all by yourself. It took courage, while you could do acting with other people. So the acting kind of took over."

ACTING IS FUN

wig on him and from a distance, you would swear it was me. They don't mind having a sister who's an actress because both my brothers are actors.

Maurice: Do people treat you differently because you are a star?

McNichol: No matter where I go, people treat me as though I'm the biggest thing that ever hit their lives. I've even found that some of the people I knew before I was on television regularly treat me different now. Even they treat me like a star! I don't like that. I want to be treated like I'm normal! I appreciate it, but it can get to you. Of course, I tell them "Thank you," but its still kind of strange.

Maurice: Are you a women's libber?

McNichol: No, not really. I really enjoy being a girl. I like to have boys open the door for me and treat me feminine. We girls are something super and I'm very proud and happy to be a girl.

Maurice: When you look in the mirror, what do you see?

McNichol: My nose is kind of flat, my lips are too big. I wish I had longer eyelashes. I'm not very big, but I'm thin and attractive.

Maurice: Honestly, what's it like being a TV star?

McNichol: Being a TV star is a once-in-a-lifetime thing, and it's great! You get to travel all over the world, you go to fantastic parties, and some people even get neat awards — like an Oscar or an Emmy.

But who's a star? In my own eyes, I'm not! I just got lucky.

Maurice: What turns you off?

McNichol: I don't like phonies! I like people who are polite, not rude or phony. It makes me feel funny to be treated like a celebrity, or a star. I like normal people and I'd like to be treated like a normal person. I wish people would let me be me.

Maurice: Do you feel lucky, and why?

McNichol: I guess more than feeling lucky, I feel fortunate. My mother and my brothers believe in me and my dreams. How lucky can one be than to have those who love you believe in you.

Looking at Stars

Eight Sessions for Travolta

For John Travolta fans wondering how often he'll get to class on this season's "Welcome Back, Kotter," the answer is: eight sessions. And that's not bad at all, considering that the movie deals spawned by his "Saturday Night Fever" success are competing for his time and talent. Incidentally, his new billing on the series is "Special Guest Star."

Meanwhile, may the newest sweathog, Stephen Shortridge strike the kind of luck that befell Cheryl Ladd when she stepped into the last-season vacancy caused by the absence of Farrah Fawcett-Majors (who is now also back on a four-episode guest-star deal). Stephen may have limitations as the Beau de Labarre character, but he's only acting, folks. His parents are both educators, and he himself was both good enough student and athlete to win a scholarship to Idaho State College.

So may fun continue to be fun — for the viewer — but the farce roles are played by disciplined goal-oriented actors.

And speaking of goal-orientation. Coincidentally, in the real world, this is the week when high-school sophomores get the word about the HOBY opportunity open to them for only this one year of their lives. HOBY is the new acronym for the HUGH O'BRIEN Youth Foundation Scholarships. Winners from each state get an all-expenses paid seminar week to Atlanta next April for the leadership seminar now in its 20th year.

Last year's winners got to rap with the publisher of The New York Times, the head of NBC and Muhammad Ali ... among others. Presidents and senators (often of diverse political views) concur that this is a project worthy of their time ... and so they participate. For the first 10 years Hugh funded it wholly by himself from his movie and TV earnings. Now, in the interests of expanding to a number of interim regional seminars, he's getting supplemental donations.

The project's intent: "To reward — and call attention to the good youngster" who is a good citizen. And there's a special note for motivated 15-year-olds from Hugh himself. "The selection process begins the end of September when all public and private (including parochial) high school principals receive the selection material from the National Association of Secondary School Principals ... deadline for schools to send in their one selected boy or girl is Nov. 16. EVERY sophomore is eligible." Hugh adds, even if posters are not put up ... those interested should then contact their principals. The info has been sent to them. Norman Cousins and Mamie Doud Eisenhower are the Chairman and Honorary Chairman of the Selections Committee.

Abe Vigoda waited a long time for his first big TV break in "Barney Miller." Therefore, he's slightly less than charitable about the demise of his spin-off series, "Fish." Blames it on "poor writing." Maybe it was just a poor idea to dilute a funny series in the first place?

Whatever, Abe's doing all right along the guest route. He's already taped a "Rockford Files" episode with James Garner and then he still has a Broadway play in the offing.

Definitely not funny. But at the very least, top-of-the head. That's the repartee of the last spring when "Little House on the Prairie" had its wrap-up party. Teenage Melissa Anderson (Mary Ingalls) said to Alison Arngrim (Nasty Nellie Olsen), "Yes, but I won't be seeing you." She meant, of course, that while she would be back in the story line (with first a teaching career and then marriage ahead), producer-star Michael Landon had informed her that the true story of Mary (from the bio of sister Laura) would be followed. Mary, early in her life, suffered irreversible blindness. Though Landon has allowed himself dramatic licence in other aspects of the pioneer saga, he insisted on fidelity with the Mary theme.

Lord Grade — known as Sir Lew until Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth upgraded him — is reported committed to taping Joey Heatherton's London Palladium appearance for world wide distribution.

John Hearn's Collectibles

R. B. Langstaff of London, Ont., asks about an unusual Canadian $1 bill which lacks a serial number. He wonders if it might be valuable.

This question came up a couple of years ago. I went into it carefully at that time and got no explanation whatever. I talked to coin dealers who said they were not rare and not valuable. One said that large numbers of them had been issued during 1967 — an odd way of homouring the Centennial. Another said that the number had simply been washed out. I threw a dollar bill in with my laundry and sent another to the cleaners. In both experiments the serial mumber came back unblemished. If there is an explanation I would be happy to pass it on.

Mrs. V. Finch of Victoria wants me to settle an argument — is there any actual bone in bone china.

Certainly. Animal bone is burnt to an ash and finely pulverised. It constitutes more than 50% of the finished mix with chinaclay and Corish stone. It is the bone content which produces that pure whiteness and contributes much of its strength. It has been made since the 18th century.

I have heard of Mickey Mouse watches trading for more than $100 but personally I would not touch one with a ten foot pole. Apart from the price being out of line with any true value, the problems of authenticity are overwhelming. Take any old watch from the 1930s — worth virtually nothing — and place a suitably aged Mickey Mouse face — worth maybe 50c — on it and you've got yourself a $100 watch. I assume Tom Weston's watch in a genuine golden oldie in which case the answer is 'around $100' but from other sources, let the buyer beware.

L. Ferguson of Toronto has started collectin lightning rod balls and would like more information.

Most of them date from between 1900 and 1930; after that they started going into porcelain and later still to plastic. I understand that there are at least 150 different Canadian balls and new specimens are still being discovered. Most of them are the familiar spherical opaque turquoise but they also come in amber, white, sun-coloured amethyst, emerald green and ruby red. Mostly they trade in the $5-$10 bracket.

The subject reminds me of the lunacy which seems to overtake all collectors when confronted by some inaccessible object of their desire. A couple of years back I want to visit a friend who had just bought a country property on which was a partly fallen down barn. High up on a still standing ridge was one remaining lightning rod ball. It bugged me all day till finally I clambered up the rungs of the silo, onto the eaves of the barn from whence, spreading myself as flat as I could. I wriggled over the rotting roof, 80 feet above the ground, up to the ridge and returned triumphantly bearing the lightning rod ball which I later sold for $5.

JOE HARDY (Shaun Cassidy) and his brother face grave danger at an archaelogical site in Greece where they have gone to recover a stolen army missile in Search for Atlantis, airing on the ABC Television Network's Hardy Boys Mysteries, Sunday Oct. 22 at 7 p.m.

Show follows kids in action all across the U.S.. and abroad. The real life adventures for teens and their families airs Saturdays at 10 a.m. on Channel 9.

Studio See Offers Action, Adventure

Falling into a neck-deep mud hole or avoiding the lethal hit of a spitting cobra is not anyone's idea of "the good life," but it's all in a day's work for the crew of "Studio See," public television's exciting Saturday magazine for family viewing.

Producer Jayne Adair created this lively series three years ago at the South Carolina Educational Television Network with the purpose of providing an action-packed program with interest for the entire family.

"The Saturday morning cartoon block is a ghetto that isolates kid viewers from the rest of the family," claims Adair, who believes successful programming for children should be more varied than the present commercial schedule.

"Kids are the most challenging audience the media has today. They are so media-wise that they won't spend their time watching anything other than the most action-packed, professionally producesd shows."

These ideas have produced a series of real life adventures taped on location all over the United States. Features spotlight gutsy subjects like a behind-the-scenes look at televiaion violence, the response of a New England community to juvenile delinquency problems and an ecology trip down the Husdon River on board folk singer Peter Seeger's sloop, The Clearwater.

This sampling of teen interests and activities offers no consistent "star" or program "host," but focuses attention on the real kids who are the subjects of the feature stories.

"This is a grass-roots program," comments Adair. "A 'star' only makes the viewer more aware of the distance between himself and whomever he's watching. We are attempting to honestly present a world and people that kids can relate to...people like the viewers themselves."

From Europe to the Cayman Islands to locations across the United Sistes, the travelling "Studio See" production teams have faced a variety of bizarre challenges: the re-enactment of a freeway car accident handled by a teenage motor assist patrol; the wilderness round-up of wild mustangs in Colorado; and the frenzied blockhouse action at the launch of a young astrophysicist's missile experiment.

"We figure that if we're ever bored, that will be the time to stop production," Adair comments, "and from the looks of the schedule, that's not likely to happen."

CABLE 10 CABLEVISION VICTORIA

"FOCUS"

A neighbourhood-orientated series sponsored by the James Bay Residents League. (J.B.R.L.) Neighborhood groups will be given the opportunity to use this twice-monthly, one-hour, time slot to explain and examine their communities' concerns.

The J.B.R.L. will produce the first programme and examine a concern of theirs, Education Costs. A panel of critics and a studio audience will question three guest authorities on education. Well-known, local personality Maggi Lynn will moderate this live programme.

WATCH FOR THE DEBUT OF THIS SERIES, THURSDAY, OCT. 26th AT 7 P.M. ON CABLE 10 VICTORIA.

Hatch Now Happy In Battlestar Role

By DICK MAURICE

RICHARD HATCH, who plays Apollo in "Battlestar: Galactica," almost didn't blast off on the new ABC hit show. It is true that in the very beginning, Richard didn't want the role in "Battlestar."

Richard confessed, "They had called me six months ago about it, but I said: 'That is not an actor's piece and I am not going to be able to express myself as an actor. I don't want to just go around with space shootings and laser guns,' so I didn't go to the audition."

What made the former "Streets of San Francisco" star change his mind?

"We'll, six months later, I got a call that they wanted to see me, and I said: 'Look, I said that I'm not interested.' But they said: 'Well, just go and read the script. It's been changed and rewritten. Read the script.'

"I read the script and it was more interesting than I thought. The storyline and the characters were really well developed—it seemed to be real people here, but I was still ambivalent. I felt: 'I don't know if this is the kind of thing I want to be committed to.' Making a commitment to a series is like making a commitment to a wife."

Obviously, Richard and "Battlestar" are glad they said, "I do."

with several of these creators — two of whom have died since the taping. The late Delmer Daves recreates a shootout scene and discusses his directing style and rationale. The legendary Howard Hawks sums up the directorial attitude: "I never was interested in telling a moral or taking sides. I just was interested in pictures that will be entertainment."

Reel West concludes with a look at the future of the western. Talking with Peter Fonda, Margot Kidder, and writer-director Tom McGuane ("Missouri Breaks"), the program explores the "new formulas," and the age of the flawed hero.

New Comedy for NBC

Multi-Millionaire Adopts Two Black Ghetto Kids

By TOM SHALES
Washington Post

NEW YORK — In Hollywood, taping has begun on the first episode of a new situation comedy called "Different Strokes," about a lovable multi-millionaire who adopts two black kids from an urban ghetto. The show is produced by the Tandem production company founded by Norman Lear, but that's not whose baby it really is.

It's the baby of a man who lives in meetings a few thousand miles to the East. When "Different Strokes" goes on the air the night of Nov. 3, it will be the first Fred Silverman show on NBC.

Until now, Silverman, who took over as NBC president and chief executive officer June 9, has only been able to affect the prime-time schedule by toying with and relocating programs initiated under a revious regime. This era ends with "Different Strokes," which stars Conrad Bain and a 9-year-old find from Chicago named Gary Coleman — who was personally chosen by Silverman.

"I feel like I've been here a year already," says Silverman as he settles into a chair in his 6th floor Rockefeller Center office. "But I love it. It's an exhilarating job. The people who were already here and the people I've brought in make a marvelous team, and I think the morale is better here now than it is at either of the other two networks,"

The day so far has been a typical one for Silverman, of whom a colleague says "'dedicated' is really to mild a term. 'Obsessive' is more like it." The day began at 10 a.m. with a meeting on the reorganization of the NBC Radio network. As often happens, Silverman didn't interrupt it for lunch — he "sent out," an old habit from ABC days. The meeting ended at 5:30, and was followed by talks with Vice President Paul Klein, NBC News President Les Crystal and a meeting on government relations," a topic in which Silverman thinks himself not very proficient.

That's partly why Silverman chose another dynamo, Jane Cahill Pfeiffer, to be the new board chairman of NBC. She'll be responsible for "the whole Washington scene," he says.

Silverman, meanwhile, estimates he spends about 25 percent of his time on the TV network's prime-time schedule. It is likely that "The Waverly Wonders," the Joe Namath comedy that has barely made a peep in the ratings, will be displaced if not simply canceled to make room for "Different Strokes," but he still holds out hope for the show that follows it, "Who's Watching the Kids?"

This platypus of a television program has been through more changes than Elizabeth Ashley already; now Silverman say the comedy series will be refocused away from the cutesy kiddies in the cast and toward the two zany bachelors next door, played by John Belushi's brother Jim and Larry Breeding.

"When those two guys are on the screen together, the show is funny," Silverman says. "What we have in mind is a sort of the flip side of 'Laverene and Shirley.'"

A whole new season of pilot shows has been commissioned by NBC, and among those Silverman has high hopes for is "Mrs. Columbo." He's trying now to sign a certain top Hollywood actress to play the formerly unseen wife of Peter Falk's venerable Lt. Columbo, who would become the new unseen spouse of the new detective-comedy series.

Silverman has been criticized for moving "Quincy" out of its successful Friday night berth and into the network's weak Thursday night lineup. Among the most vocal protesters over this heresy is the star of the show, Jack Klugman.

"He has calmed down," says Silverman with unmitigated finality. "'Quincy' is actually getting bigger audiences this year because there are more sets in use on Thursday night than on Friday night. The show will work where it is." On other fronts, Silverman thinks ABC's "Battlestar Galactica" will fizzle because "science fiction is a cult thing, and always has been on television," and says of ABC's "Taxi," a new hit comedy, "I wish we had it. But it wouldn't succeed on NBC right now because we don't have enough strong shows to support it; it's a special show, kind of delicate."

Meanwhile, it looks like curtains for old Grandpa on "Grandpa Goes to Washington," which hasn't been able to faze, much less threaten, the Silverman-engineered one-two of "Happy Days" and "Laverene and Shirley." Perhaps nothing could.

"Never say 'nothing,'" cautions Silverman. "'Happy Days' is one of those shows that has been around a long time. It can't last much longer. Somebody is going to come along with an idea that will work."

Thus we have the new Silverman in head-to-head combat with the old. There are no signs the warrior is wearying. To the contrary. He sounds much bouncier now than he did last spring when Numero Uno ABC was celebrating its 25th anniversary with a series of shebangs on the West Coast, and Silverman, architect of the triumph, sat glumly at a party table and moped that his life was "boring."

"The thing about this business," Silverman says, "is that after you've done it, after you've become the leader, things get tenser. That's when it's really tense. The most fun I had at ABC was at the beginning, that first year, when everybody pitched in to make it work, and the ratings started getting better, and there was a wonderful atmosphere about it.

"Once you arrive at the point of leadership, you turn into a caretaker, a custodian. Then if, God forbid, the ratings should slip a tenth of a point the guys in the sales department start screaming, and if the stock should fall a half a point, people downstairs start screaming.

"I think that in$v or 10 years, the people who are at NBC now are going to look back on this period as the best time of their lives." The best time of his life, too? "I believe it will be."

Siverman began his NBC reign by calling for "programming that does not violate general standards of taste," which drew a few hoots from Hollywood where, it was alleged, the ABC-Silverman had ordered producers to put more sex and skin into their shows.

"That," says Silverman, barely raising his condensed-milk voice, "is a goddamned lie. Never in my life did I do anything like that. I know which producer started that story, and it simply isn't true."

Silverman tickled a few more eyebrows when he called upon advertisers and their agencies to increase their "participation" in so-called "creative" decisions and program development at the networks. If there's anything television doesn't need, it's for sponsors to have more control over shows.

"I didn't say give them more control," says Silverman. "I said, increase the creative input. We need more ideas and more voices."

Althoagh."Different Strokes" will be the first Fred Silverman show on NBC, he has made his own network debut already, stalking out on the "Tonight" show to congratulate Johnny Carson on "15 fabulous years" with the network, even though Carson was celebrating 16 fabulous years.

Silverman was not thrilled with his own performance, but he was suffering from a cold and a still-lingering laryngitis (and he refuses to cut down on his huge daily intake of Salems).

The charming and revealing thing is that one of the most powerful men in American media was actually awed and intimidated by Johnny Carson.

ALAN BATES (left) accuses Malcolm McDowell of having an affair with his wife in Harold Pinter's The Collection, premiering on Great Performances, Wednesday, Oct. 25, at 9 p.m. over the Public Broadcasting Service. But did the affair really happen? This dramatic battle of wits also stars Laurence Olivier and Helen Mirren.

PBS AIRS THE COLLECTION

Laurence Olivier, Alan Bates, Malcolm McDowell and Helen Mirren star in Harold Pinter's brooding thriller, The Collection, airing on Channel 9, Wednesday, Oct. 25 at 9 p.m. as a special presentation of Great Performances.

The Collection, which won the International Emmy for Drama in 1977, tells the story of four people caught in a web of jealousy, suspicion and revenge. At the centre of the tangle is a mystery — it may be based on a truth, a half-truth or a downright lie. The play, written in 1960, is a uniquely Pinteresque blend of menace, suspense and unexpected humor.

Laurence Olivier compounded his acting role in The Collection by also producing the teleplay for London's Granada Television. This is his third effort as a television producer, with "Cat On A Hot Tin Roof" and "Come Back, Little Sheba" successfully under his belt. Olivier confesses, "It's very interesting learning a new meduim at my age — it's good, hard, creative exercise."

Alan Bates and Harold Pinter have a long professional, personal and artistic relationship stretching over the past 18 years. "I first worked with Pinter in the original production of "The Caretaker" in 1960, Bates said. "Pinter is always growing, always changing and that makes it a challenge to work with him." Bates has starred in Pinter's "The Go-Between" and in "Butley" which Pinter directed.

Critical response to the production in England was unanimously enthusiastic. The Manchester Guardian called it a presentation "which adds the mellow polish that sets off such an heirloom to best effect." The Sunday Times, "Every shot is right," and the Daily Telegraph praised the "outstanding cast." London's Sunday People said, "If you have never really watched a great actor, catch Laurence Olivier in The Collection — and have something to tell your grandchildren."

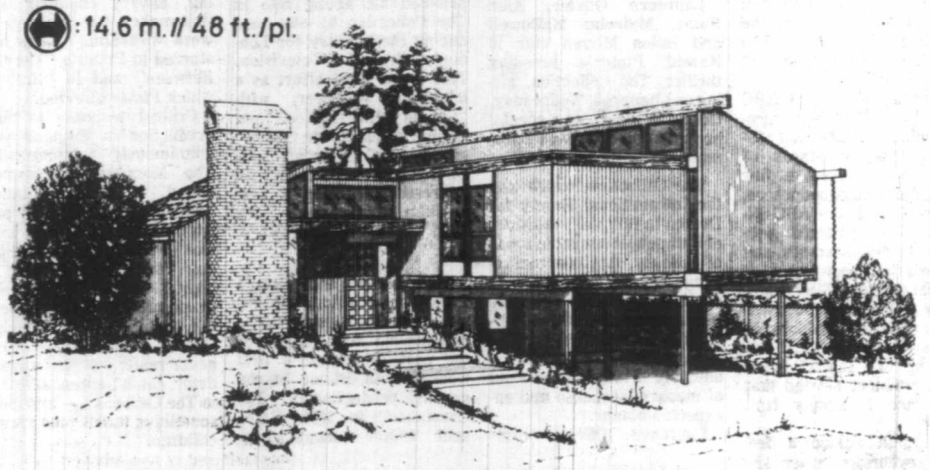
14.6 m.// 48 ft./pi.



Modern Home for Family Living

Here's a contemporary design with three bedrooms and abundant room for future expansion, — a recreation facility, bathroom and utility room in the roughed-in basement. The double carport may easily be enclosed in colder climates without great structural change or noticeable expense.

From the main entrance foyer, past the spacious closet storage to twin staircases, — either down to the basement or up to the bedroom complex.

On the upper level, to the rear of the home is the dining room with open balustrade overlooking the living room, but only a few short steps to the kitchen. The U-shaped kitchen is complete with all modern conveniences and has a snack-bar counter and pass-through on the family room side.

The comfortable family room opens directly onto a rear deck, and has a stairway down at the side of the home. A further convenience of this family area is the three-piece bath located centrally to the bedrooms and the family room.

Luxury and utility are the main features of the master bedroom. A large walk-in closet and a three-piece ensuite bath with shower. The two secondary bedrooms utilize the twin vanity, main bathroom, which also serves as a guest powder room.

Isolated from the bedroom wing for freedom from disturbance, the living room is ideal for large parties, and can be extended to the back patio in fine weather through sliding glass doors. During less fair weather, the woodburning fireplace can create an atmosphere of cosy conviviality.

Plans for design No. 576-1505 may be purchased either by single set, at a cost of $70 for the first set and $10 for each additional set, or by the package. A five-set plan package, including the first set, is economically priced at $100 and an eight-set package, also including the first set, is only $125.

Whichever method you choose, please include $4 for postage and handling. B.C. residents add 5 per cent sales tax.

Send for the current edition of Select Home Designs, Series 38, featuring imaginative decorating and home improvement ideas, plus 350 quality home plans of every type. Available for $2.25 ($1.75 plus 50 cents postage and handling).

To order any of these items please send cheque or money order payable to the Home of the Week. Address to: Home of the Week, c/o Victoria Press, 382 West Broadway, Vancouver, B.C., V5Y 1R2.

TV MAILBAG

By THOM MEAD
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — The TV Mailbag:

Q. I think "The Incredible Hulk" is the best show on television these days. I'm particularly interested in the series' theme song. It's really beautiful, especially when they play it sometimes when David Brenner changes into the Hulk. Could you tell me where I could get a record or the sheet music of the theme song? Also, could you give me the address to write to Bill Bixby? — L. C. Warren, Ohio.

A. "The Theme from the Hulk" was recently recorded on a 45 disc by Epic Records. Billy Sherrill recorded the song, composed by Joe Harnell. You should be able to pick up the song at any local record store. As for Bixby, I suggest you write in care of Universal Television, 100 Universal City Plaza, Universal City, Calif. 91608.

Q. How about some information on Larry Wilcox, who plays Officer Baker on "CHiPS?" — M. R. Winchester, Virginia.

A. Wilcox was born in San Diego, Calif., but raised in Wyoming. He's a Vietnam combat veteran. He first started acting in the old "Lassie" series and a few Walt Disney films. He subsequently moved on to more challenging acting assignments, including appearances on "MASH," "Streets of San Francisco," "Hawaii Five-O" and "Police Story." An expert at horseback riding and lassoing, Wilcox spends many weekends on the rodeo circuit in roping competition. He also devotes time to writing screenplays. He's married to Judy Nagner. They have two children, Derek, 9, and Heidi, 4, and live in Thousand Oaks near Los Angeles.

Q. Could you tell me the real name of the ship they use in "The Love Boat?" Also, how long are they out to sea filming the series? — E. B. Kinsman, Ohio.

A. I think you're in for a big dissappointment. The series does not use a real pleasure boat, except in very rare instances. Most of the filming of "The Love Boat" takes place aboard an exact replica of a cruise ship built on a large studio sound stage. Some stock footage is used to give the appearance the boat is sailing along the blue Pacific Ocean.

Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies. Inquiries should be sent to Thom Mead, TV Mailbag, c/o Revue, Box 300, Victoria, B.C., V8W 2N4.

BOOKS

Pat Barclay

Judith, the 50 thousand dollar novel, is here at last. And wouldn't you know it, it turns out to be one of those maddening books which push the honest reviewer into his or her least favorite position — squarely on top of the fence. Judith herself is rather a bore, but her pigs are great. (Judith, as you've probably already heard, is a pig farmer). Author Aritha van Herk fragments the novel's time sequence at will, producing a degree of confusion as irritating as it is unnecessary; on the other hand, her writing style is economical, forceful and direct. The novel's ending is ambiguous yet it has its point, and so on. In short, Judith is one of those books which the luckless reviewer ends up by praising with faint damns.

Judith Pierce is 23, the only child of a pig farmer who thought she had escaped a life spent shovelling manure by running off to Edmonton and finding work as a secretary. No such luck. The combined forces of love and guilt drive her back to the farm — not her father's farm this time, but her own — and a new life as an independent woman.

On her father's farm she did as she was told and suffered from hopeless, inexpressible, forbidden love for the old man. In Edmonton she did as she was told and suffered the sexual advances of her boss. Now, on her own at last, she lunges towards sexual liberation in the company of 10 farrowing, very female, sows. When the piglets are two months old, she castrates the males "swift and cruel . . . flicking their testicles onto the floor of the chorehouse like offending parasites." (One male reviewer, commenting on this scene, confessed he found it so vivid that while reading it he instinctively crossed his legs).

For a time it appears that van Herk will plump for a lesbian solution to Judith's problem with men. Her relationship with the sows is steamy, to say the least, ("She was whole here, a part of their tumescent sanctuary of female warmth," etc.) and after Marian Engel's Bear, anything should be possible. But van Herk ducks the issue by linking Judith with Circe, the goddess who transformed men into swine.

Similarly, her friendship with her neighbor Mina hints at something deeper, only to shy away. Near the book's close the women watch Judith's recently-purchased boar attempt to mount Marie Antoinette, one of the sows, and laugh at his clumsy attempts. "After all, that's all he gets to do. Only limited usefulness," says Judith. And when, the boar's duty done, the sow repulses his second attempt: "You tell him, Marie Antoinette," cried Mina. "You tell him." More uproarious laughter. The message is clear: Males are indeed necessary, but their "usefulness" is "limited".

But Judith reads like a feminist tract only in part, for when its heroine is not agonizing over her sexuality and the inability of men to comprehend it, she is sensibly caring for her pigs. The pigs, as mentioned before, are great. ("They were all standing at attention anticipating her arrival, the row of mammoth heads exactly the same turn and inclination . . . but she refused to speak to them even though the bravest of them whoofed softly to encourage her — with the stubbornness of piggy patience, (they) determined to outwait her.") Maybe the ins and outs of pig farming is something you've never cared to know, but you've got to admit it makes an unusual background for a novel.

There's a good scene in a beer parlor when Judith, angered by the jibes of a group of barflies, starts hurling glasses at her tormentors and has to be dragged outside by her embarrassed escort. On the other hand, the flashbacks to the Edmonton affair are uniformly dreary. How, one wonders, did this beer-slinging termagant resist a showdown with such an "arrogant" lover?

If Judith's motives seem arbitrarily arrived at, they've got nothing on van Herk's handling of time. The novel was written as a thesis for an M.A. degree in creative writing at the University of Alberta, where she studied with Rudy Wiebe. Wiebe is a fine novelist, quite possibly the best Canada has produced, but he is not noted for the accessibility of his style. Obviously, van Herk was an apt pupil.

VAN HERK . . . the pigs are great

Her book is better than many first novels, unimpressive beside others. She is a talented writer who is off to a phenomenally lucky start. If she's half as tough-minded as her heroine, she'll be out to prove it's not just a flash in the pan.

Making Joe Clark Even Less Than He Is

By GEOFFREY STEVENS

Were it not for a disinclination to invite the wrath of Joe Clark and his cohorts by suggesting yet another intolerable intrusion by the state into the holy land of the private sector, I'd be tempted to propose there ought to be a law against the publication of premature political biographies. It is a favor neither to the subject nor to the reader to inflict on the market a book which has no important or interesting information to impart.

Clark has been a leader of the Progressive Conservative Party for 32 months. In this short span, he has twice been the victim (if that's the word) of premature publication.

Styrofoam emotions

The first, published earlier this year, was Joe Clark: A Portrait, a sympathetic rendering of the life and times of the Tory leader by David L. Humphreys. The book established conclusively that, although Clark may be a fine fellow to have for a friend, he can't yet sustain a full biography.

Now, with the publication of Joe Clark: The Emerging Leader, we have proof that he can't sustain a picture book, either. Or, perhaps it's just that he hasn't emerged from wherever he's been for his first 39 years.

CLARK . . . premature publication

This is not to say that the 96 black and white photographs — almost all by Ted Grant — are uninteresting. He has captured Clark being forceful and being relaxed, talking to John Diefenbaker, looking at his wife, standing on a chair, talking on the telephone, cooing to his daughter, even sleeping. Somehow, he manages to look the same in all of them. Have we produced a political leader who is devoid of emotion, the ultimate stoic to whom joy and sorrow, victory and defeat rate the same expression, no more, no less, as drinking coffee from a styrofoam cup?

What makes him tick?

It would be a mistake, I think, to dismiss Michael Nolan's text as superficial. It's worse than that. Nolan manages to trace Clark's career and daily routine without giving a hint of what makes the man tick, what he believes, why he got where he did, and what he wants to do with his party and country. Unless, of course, there is hidden meaning in the information that Clark liked the movie Rocky, but found Network artificial, or that he buys his suits at Harry Pozy's in Ottawa, when he doesn't buy them at O'Connor's in Calgary.

Nolan, a former broadcaster who now teaches journalism, serves up the conventional wisdom that Clark was a cracker-jack political organizer. No evidence is offered. Nor is it clear how Clark succeeded in winning the leadership. Nolan takes us through the process by which Clark, with the assistance of his staff and caucus advisers, prepares an inarticulate question to lead off the Commons Question Period. He neglects to tell us how the leader felt about the defection of Jack Horner that same week.

Office furnishings

We are given a primer on how a party caucus functions, a description of the furnishings in the Leader of the Opposition's office in the Centre Block, and an inflated assessment of the leader's staff. Reading the book, one discovers that Clark wants to change Confederation. How? Apparently by means of "balanced federalism", rather than "decentralization", because the latter expression worries people — or so the leader is reported to have told his caucus.

But enough. The Emerging Leader, even though it reads as though it were an authorized picture book, succeeds in making Clark more banal than he is, or could possibly be. Yes, there ought to be a law.

Second Leakey book a bid To create a cult of personality

Earlier this year — on March 4 to be exact — I reviewed Origins, by Richard Leakey and Roger Lewin, a well-written, profusely illustrated, thought-provoking book which dealt with the emergence of our species and speculated on its possible future in the light of knowledge gained by new discoveries. The book's general excellence was sufficiently impressive for me to suggest that it could become the book of the year. A recent second reading served to strengthen this opinion.

The same authors now offer us People of the Lake. When I picked it up and read its sub-title, Mankind and its Beginnings — another way of saying origins — I wondered what these two could possibly have to say that they hadn't already said in their earlier book, published only a few months ago. The answer turns out to be — nothing, that is to say, nothing of consequence.

LEAKEY . . . counter-theory

True, they have switched to another publisher, but then that is an added reason for the avoidance of repetition. So, what's their game? It seems to be a brazen attempt to create a cult of personality. The only authoritative voice in the field of prehistory, we are informed in as many words, is that of Richard Leakey, and the truth, as inscribed by him on tablets at Koobi Fora, on the shores of Lake Turkana in Kenya, will be carried down and shown to the world by his idolater, Roger Lewin.

This was apparent in Origins, but in that book drums and trumpets were muted and Leakey's pronouncements seemed less iconoclastic and more like the stated beliefs of an enthusiastic young scientist able to communicate his excitement in challenging the unknown.

Although People of the Lake, like Origins, purports to have Leakey as chief author, it is obvious that all the actual writing was done by Lewin, science editor of New Scientist and author of several biology books. Having hitched his wagon to Leakey's star, Lewin's role is to make us think it is the sun.

If you haven't read Origins I urge you to do so, for the prehistoric theme has seldom, if ever, been presented in such a stimulating fashion. But if you have read Origins there is no point in your reading People of the Lake for, to all intents and purposes, the content of both books is identical. The difference is solely one of emphasis.

As a layman I view anthropology as an inexact science, for although fossils can be accurately dated the physiological and psychological study of early man, to say nothing of extinct hominid species, is essentially nothing more than educated guesswork and, as every detective knows, deductions made from guesses are unacceptable as evidence.

Bones and stones

We are dealing here with a period extending from one to fifteen million years ago and the only solid evidence we possess is some bones and stones, and not many of them either. In fact, all the fossil remains so far discovered of our ancestors (and their biological relatives) who lived, say, between one and five million years ago could be spread out on a couple of large trestle tables. And hominid fossil finds of between six and fifteen million years ago would fit comfortably into a shoebox.

No single complete skeleton of one of our ancestors has been found and there aren't enough fossil fragments to construct a composite skeleton. The search for ever more ancient fossils continues, of course, and an unusual find always triggers great excitement, but this has ceased to be the focus of scientific interest.

The man responsible for pointing out that bones and stones by themselves are boring and that minds can be made to race only by conjecturing what they mean was an American, Robert Ardrey, whose four major works — African Genesis, The Territorial Imperative, The Social Contract, and The Hunting Hypothesis — not only earned him several fortunes but also alerted the scientific fraternity to an exciting new phase in research on human origins.

And the science establishment never forgave him, for not only did he offend by writing best-sellers in which he informed the peasantry of things normally confined to scientific journals, but he also had the insolence to advance his own heretical opinions. And worst of all, the man was only a common playwright!

What also got under the establishment's skin was that Ardrey publicized the then scientifically unacceptable views of South African anatomist Raymond Dart and provided a world forum for the unorthodox views of prehistorian Louis Leakey of Olduvai Gorge fame. The drive and determination on the field of both these men was anathema to the chair-borne academic establishment.

The chief bone of contention was the theory evolved by Dart and developed by Ardrey thet the territorial imperative had bred aggression in early man. This sat well with the general public, which was comforted by the thought that aggressive tendencies in man are genetic and therefore natural. But worse was to come.

Konrad Lorenz, co-founder of the science of ethology, whose delightful books were also best-sellers, supported the Ardrey-Dart thesis that humans are innately aggressive, and in a book titled On Aggression maintained that war is in our genes.

The establishment people hit back as best they could, but no one listened. The problem was that their spokesmen, led by the dull, humorless Ashley Montagu, lacked the charm and common touch of Lorenz and the superb writing ability of the persuasive Ardrey. And when Desmond Morris, the zoologist who hates zoos, joined the aggressionists in another best-seller, Naked Ape, the seemingly beaten establishment fell silent, at least in the public arena.

And that is how matters stood when Origins was published earlier this year. In that book Richard Leakey advanced his counter-theory that early man had been a peaceable animal, cooperating in gathering roots, berries and fruits and sharing the spoils of the hunt, and that aggression was a learned skill acquired a mere 10,000 years ago when agriculture began and standing crops and domesticated cattle presented something to plunder and defend.

The theory was a convincing one, made more so by Roger Lewin's presentation of it in a clear, clean prose style that had the popular touch lacking since Ardrey had burst on the scene. When Origins became a best-seller, the establishment knew they had found their spokesmen in the Leakey-Lewin combination.

The thing for Leakey-Lewin to do of course was to cash in on their new-found status and hurriedly produce a follow-up book. Hence, People of the Lake. Having read it, it is evident to me that they were taken unawares and settled for a new publisher willing to accept a re-write of Origins.

However, Lewin has taken full advatage of the situation to attack Lorenz and Ardrey repeatedly, and to create an image of young Richard Leakey as the world's foremost paleoanthropologist, surrounded and supported by a youthful team of brilliant anthropologists, taphonomists, geologists, primatologists and psychologists, all engaged in uncovering clues to our prehistoric past and deciding what they reveal about our emotional and intellectual life and the meaning of human nature itself.

A slick PR job

All is grist to Lewin's mill. He uses the field observations of Jane Goodall and others, often without accreditation (and there is no bibliography), to support his thesis, and actually makes it appear that the outstanding work of Mary Leakey at Olduvai Gorge, as well as that of the joint French-American expedition and that of Don Johanson and his team, both doing magnificent work in neighboring Ethiopia, are part and parcel of Richard Leakey's Kenyan operation. In short, People of the Lake is a slick job of public relations.

The joke is not so much that the establishment has accepted the son of their old enemy, Louis Leakey, but that in allowing Richard Leakey to become their spokesman they have bestowed their blessing on a self-proclaimed scientist without a university degree!

Adolescent Suicide: What Makes Them Do It?

WALT KELLYTHORNE

Growing Up Dead is the result of the tremendous response to a radio program Barbara Rabkin aired in 1977. Rabkin discovered that the suicide rate for North American young people "has almost tripled" in the last 20 years — and that this year alone 10,000 young Canadians will try to kill themselves.

Wisely, Rabkin has generally avoided the use of statistics and jargon; Growing Up Dead is, rather, "an attempt to present suicide . . . in the very words of people who have experienced it."

Bill, Doreen, Greta, Lenore, Mark, Diane and others: each unfolds a tale of cumulative parental neglect and abuse that led to their attempts at self-destruction.

Such attempts, Rabkin believes, are both cries for help from people caught in intolerable stressful situations, and a means of expressing the enormous anger these teenagers feel for their parents — and for themselves. Rarely, though, is an attempt at suicide a determined effort to end one's life. As Rabkin points out, 70 per cent of attempted teenage suicides take place at home while the parents are in the house, and the children usually call for rescue — on the telephone.

Although Rabkin writes that "the challenge to parents is to inspire love, growth and life in their children," she also discovered that "too often . . . parents . . . have no love to give."

Thus for these and other children raised by parents who are loveless and lifeless, death becomes the norm, and also the means to treat with life as it's structured in our society.

And what kind of society is that? Given the basic function of Rabkin's book, and the age of the people speaking (heavily edited, one suspects) in it, it's not surprising to find in Growing Up Dead no description or analysis of our society that might shed some light on what inspires such negative responses in parents and children — and surely such description and analysis would fill more than one volume anyway!

One does find, however, one very obvious fact in this book: the means of self-inflicted death are everywhere at hand.

Alcohol and pills are the favorites.

As Lenore recounted of one doctor, "I could . . . go in there and get anything I wanted . . . Kids in school get to know which doctors will give pills."

And of course there's always the parental medicine chest or the government liquor store.

Although a book about adolescent suicide can hardly be called pleasant reading, it can be called saddening, frightening and interesting. Growing Up Dead is all of these, and should be read by anyone with children.

The life you might save is worth your time.

Some Master! Some Magic!

By CHRISTOPHER LEHMAN-HAUPT

"Listen to me. I will tell you the truth about a man's life. I will tell you the truth about his love for women. That he never hates them. Already you think I'm on the wrong track. Stay with me. Really — I'm a master of magic."

So begins Fools Die, Mario Puzo's first novel since The Godfather. In scanning the passage again after reading the book, a reader has to cringe. For already the prose of this "master of magic" portrays a fatal arrhythmia, and in what is to come he will deal out words and images like a child playing solitaire with manhole covers. If John Merlyn, the novelist-narrator of Fools Die, is a "master of magic," then Marcel Proust had amnesia and Merlyn's own literary hero, Dostoevski, spent too much of his life arranging doilies for tea.

But what is most disappointing about Fools Die is that even as a yarn, it fumbles. After the Master of Magic's introductory exhortation, it looks for a moment as if Puzo is going to spin something on the order of The Godfather, as he whisks us away to Las Vegas and tells an intriguing tale about a gambler named Jordan Hawley who hits a phenomenally lucky streak and at the height of it goes to his room and puts a bullet through his head. The crudity of the prose here is apt to the neon vulgarity of the milieu:

And Puzo obviously knows what makes the machinery of Las Vegas work.

But then, apparently determined to recapitulate his own career, Puzo wanders away from Las Vegas. Switching back and forth between first-person and third-person narratives that are otherwise impossible to distinguish from one another, he traces the career of John Merlyn through an escapade as a bribe-taking administrative clerk for the United States Army Reserves;

PUZO . . . solitaire with manhole covers

through a friendship with a world-famous novelist named Osano, who, among other outrages, makes a habit of accepting large advances from book publishers to pay alimony to his many ex-wives; through Merlyn's achievement of wealth and fame for writing his best-selling novel, and on to Hollywood and sexual promiscuity with everything from geisha girls to a bisexual starlet.

Each of these episodes is bad in its own particular way — the bribe-taking one for its insensitivity to the moral implications of tampering with the draft, the portrait of the writer Osano for its gross vulgarization of Norman Mailer and the New York literary scene, and the Hollywood segment for its wearisome banality and its coruscating contempt for women.

Even when he returns periodically to Las Vegas and comes closest to the sort of action he is good at, Puzo seems to be going through the motions half-heartedly, plotting sloppily and working worn-out material. (He seems to want Fools Die to do for the expression "You can only get rich in the dark" what The Godfather did for "An offer he couldn't refuse." But Las Vegas' euphemism for avoiding the Internal Revenue Service is too well-known to be credited to Puzo's inventiveness.)

All too soon, the air leaks out of what was to begin with a thin narrative, and we are left with nothing but inept language — with talk about "great art" that betrays not the slightest interest in or knowledge of art, with groping run-on sentences that a minimum of editing might have clarified, with cliches so obvious as to suggest that in writing Fools Die Puzo was merely recording notes on an idea for a novel.

If there is anything remotely interesting in Puzo's ramblings, it is the book's central theme concerning a cosmic contest between gamblers and percentage-players. Most of the characters in Fools Die are gamblers of one form or another, from Jordan Hawley the suicide, to Osano the celebrity-novelist, to Janelle, Merlyn's bisexual Hollywood mistress. All of the gamblers die by the novel's end, sometimes gratuitously; all of them are presumably fools.

The only major survivors are Gronevelt, the boss of Las Vegas' Xanadu Hotel, who literally worships the percentages, and Merlyn himself, whom Osano tells in a characteristically candid moment:

"You live in your own world, you do exactly what you want to do. You control your life. You never get into trouble, and when you do, you don't panic; you get out of it. Well, I admire you, but I don't envy you. I've never seen you do or say a really mean thing, but I don't think you really give a (. . . .) about anybody. You're just steering your life."

As his ultimate response to this accusation, Merlyn, in his capacity as Osano's literary executor, takes the only six pages that Osano has actually written of the "big novel" he had been telling the world was nearly finished, and uses them as the first chapter of Fools Die.

This is ostensibly Merlyn-Puzo's revenge on Osano and the literary establishment — a statement that he, with his cynical-safe approach to life, can write the book that "the most famous writer in America" couldn't. Well, I don't care whom the character is based upon — Norman Mailer or some figment of Puzo's demeaning imagination: Had Osano survived to write his "big novel," it would have been 10 times better than Fools Die. So much for the percentages.

Cosmic Contact Between Star and Skin

By JULIAN REID

Although few laymen (and all too few scientists, for that matter) seem to be aware of the fact, the scientific world-view is presently undergoing an almost unprecedented transformation — what may well turn out to be the profoundest and most far-reaching intellectual revolution since the one ushered in four centuries ago when Nicolaus Copernicus dethroned the Earth from its former place of honor in the centre of the Solar System.

Since 1957, when the launching of the first Sputnik ushered in the Space Age, almost every major scientific discipline has been more or less transfigured under the impact of unexpected new discoveries. And there is still no end in sight. Indeed, it seems safe to say that the new science of the year 2000 is destined to be almost as radically different from that of 1950 as the physics of Isaac Newton was from that of Aristotle.

It all makes for considerable confusion — and not just for the interested layman, but for the concerned professional scientist as well. New discoveries and fresh theoretical insights are emerging so rapidly that even the most highly trained of experts is likely to be a decade or more behind the times, at least outside the confines of his own narrow specialty.

Thus there is an urgent need for more and more of those rare interdisciplinary surveys that bring together a host of more or less obscure pieces of data from a multitude of specialized sources, and use them to sketch an up-to-the-minute progress report on the ongoing emergence of the new intellectual synthesis that is destined to dominate the thinking of the century to come.

The Cycles of Heaven is just such a book. Although only one of its two co-authors, Scott Hill, is himself a scientist (a biophysicist, to be precise), while the other, Guy Lyon Playfair, is a writer best known as the author of two studies of the decidedly unorthodox topic of psychic research in Brazil, their combined approach here is determinedly scientific. Speculative too, admittedly — but speculative only within firmly scientific parameters, meticulously documented in a bibliography containing over 400 separate items, many of them foreign papers unavailable in English.

Some of the material here was dealt with in one of last year's best-sellers, Fred Soyka's The Ion Effect, while other aspects of it have been treated in popular studies by Michel Gauquelin, Gay Gaer Luce, and others. But most of it is fresh and unfamiliar — and anyone whose curiosity has been teased by such earlier volumes as these should find the more comprehensive Cycles of Heaven a must.

What all this mass of miscellaneous information has in common is the way it demonstrates a degree of interdependence between the individual human being and his environment that goes far beyond the relatively limited interplay which, until recently, was all that orthodox scientists were willing to admit. It is as if we were dancers who, until just now, were aware only of the occasional isolated note or snatch of melody out of the flow of music that keeps our feet a-dancing. But now, all of a sudden, the breathtaking awareness of a whole orchestrated symphony of music is being borne unexpectedly in upon us.

What the new scientific vision reveals, according to Playfair and Hill, is that "the whole of observable space is filled with pulsating energies, none of which we fully understand. Ours is a universe of perpetual motion in all directions, with nothing from particle to planet ever in a state of rest. Life on earth has become adapted to all this activity, and we have been lulled into a false sense of security by the apparent constancy and regularity of our cosmic environment. We take if for granted, which is a mistake."

In reality, they contend, "man, like all living creatures, is an electromagnetic system in an electromagnetic environment from which he cannot isolate himself. He responds to the tides and currents of this environment in many more ways than he can consciously identify. An event originating from a distant quasar can be connected to an event in our brains. Ours is not a universe of isolated parts; we are made of the same raw material as the rest of it, and we respond to the same forces that drive and shape it all. Star and skin are in regular contact."

The evidence they cite to back up these sweeping contentions is mostly too new to have found its place in the textbooks. Much of it is more or less controversial; almost all of it, potentially anyway, is intellectual dynamite — at least here in the western democracies it is. For much of it is already accepted orthodoxy in the USSR, where, ironically, the dead hand of materialism seems to have much less of a hold on the scientific intellect than it does here.

At the same time, a great deal of this information is not merely of theoretical interest but of immediate practical importance. For instance, the generally accepted standards for "safe" levels of exposure to radio waves and other forms of electromagnetic radiation were mostly set during the 1950s, when physicists had a vested interest in viewing man as a discrete system more or less insulated from his surrounding environment. The data cited by Playfair and Hill indicate that this comfortable presumption was in fact a dangerous falsehood, and that as a result of it we are unwittingly exposing ourselves and our children to various forms of man-made "electromagnetic pollution" that may well have dire consequences to the future health and well-being of all concerned.

Lucidly readable and sometimes startling in its larger implications, The Cycles of Heaven stands out as one of the most stimulating intellectual adventures of the year — a far-ranging preview of the emerging new science that the authors have christened "cosmobiology," and which they define as "the study of the living Universe as a whole." It is a study that has been grossly neglected until recently, but Playfair and Hill have done a commendably provocative job of beginning of rectify this neglect.

IT'S OFFICIAL: NO VOTE IN '78

VANCOUVER — It's now official — there will not be a provincial election in B.C. this year.

Premier Bennett, who has been saying for the last two weeks that election speculation was created by the media not himself, finally gave a flat "no" to election questions.

Before Friday, he had contended himself with "I am not thinking about an election, I am not talking about an election," but he always left the possibility that there could be.

At a press conference after his speech to the annual Social Credit convention here, he provided the standard answer first, but when reporters repeated "Will there be an election this year?" he smiled and said "There could be a federal election and there will be municipal elections."

"Will there be a provincial election?"

"No."

'We won't mortgage the future'

SOCREDS CHEER BENNETT'S RESTRAINTS POLICY

By JIM HUME
Colonist reporter

VANCOUVER — Close to 1,500 delegates to the annual Social Credit convention here Friday gave a wild standing ovation to Premier Bennett's pledge that "we will not mortgage the future of our young."

Bennett made the emotional pledge at the midway point in his keynote speech to the 1,450 delegates registered by 11 a.m.

"We will not be party to reckless spending, wild spending, stupid spending," he said. "We will not mortgage the future of our young to the money-lenders. No way. We will deliver the services our people need and we will do it without creating a burden of crushing debt.

● Other Socred convention on stories Page 6.

"We have seen what the burden of debt has done to young countries, young governments. We will not let it happen here."

The premier, whose speech was interrupted throughout with applause, promised to continue his efforts to eliminate red tape in government — "red tape which throttles opportunity. We will give you good government, but less government."

The premier drew laughter and applause from a challenge issued to Opposition leader David Barrett whose New Democratic Party recently published a pamphlet critical of government activities.

"I'll make an offer to Mr. Barrett," the premier said. "If he will deliver the pamphlets to us I'll give him a personal guarantee that we will deliver them for him, during our operation doorstep, to every household in the province—because those leaflets say much more about them than about us."

Operation doorstep is a Social Credit door-knocking campaign which promises to cover every household in the province over the next several months.

Bennett said the NDP leaflet "does not contain one positive thought." It is full of criticism, negatives, without one single positive proposal. It tells us a great deal about them at a time when positive proposals, positive thinking is needed as never before in this country.

"They don't deserve to be the alternative to government in this province."

The premier continued to hammer away at his ideas on constitutional reform but suggested that delegates not become confused with technicalities.

"What we are asking is a fair voice in the council of Canada," he said. "We ask only a fair voice in our country's affairs. I will take that message to Ottawa again on your behalf.

"They (the federal government) cannot ignore the West any longer. Other voices should not be louder than ours.

"Our country will remain strong only as long as its parts are strong. If the parts grow weak, then we shall not

CUPW president Parrot
. . . 'only slaves cannot withdraw their labor'

CUPW vows court battles over law, injunction bids

OTTAWA (CP) — The defiant Canadian Union of Postal Workers said Friday it will challenge the government's back-to-work bill in court and will keep workers on illegal picket lines despite the fact that the government is seeking injunctions to break the strike.

CUPW President Jean-Claude Parrot said in a news conference the workers will stay out as long as it takes them to get a collective agreement.

"You want to mail a letter? Just try it," Parrot said when asked if the majority of the 23,000-workers would stay out despite the back-to-work orders.

Parrot said at a news conference the union is hiring lawyers to fight government applications for injunctions to stop picketing at postal facililies across the country.

The first such application was made in Toronto late Friday. Others were due in Halifax, Montreal, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

At the same time the union planned to challenge the entire back-to-work bill passed by Parliament Wednesday.

"Only slaves cannot withdraw their labor and postal workers will never agree to become slaves," said the tough-talking Parrot.

Justice Minister Otto Lang had announced in the Commons earlier Friday that officials from his department were gathering evidence to use against strikers violating the provisions of back-to-work legislation passed by Parliament Wednesday.

He said the government would seek injunctions to stop picketing and thus permit those CUPW workers who wanted to return to work to do so.

Under the legislation union members face fines of $100 a day for every day they are on an illegal strike.

The union leaders face a fine of $2,500 plus $250 a day and the union itself could pay $10,000.

Several of Lang's officials turned up in the small interview room in the basement of the Parliament Buildings where Parrot spoke with reporters.

Before the news conference started, the justice department officials were requested to leave by Mike Duffy, a CBC television reporter and an executive of the press gallery.

Parrot had told Duffy he would rather give his interview without the justice department officials in the room and they left without

On Island, some on job, most off

This was the situation Friday on Vancouver Island and throughout B.C., as seen by postal workers and post office management:

A management spokesman said workers were on the job in 31 of the province's 60 post offices. But he conceded that they were located in small centres and involved only a minimum of the province's postal workers.

A union official in Victoria said later that workers who had returned to the job in some areas had since walked out again.

On Vancouver Island, the workers were out in the main centres of Victoria, Duncan, Nanaimo and Port Alberni. But management said they had reported for work at Ladysmith, Parksville, Courtenay and Port Hardy.

LETTER CARRIERS in Ottawa have learned there is safety in numbers. Early Friday morning they assembled in a parking lot near the main post office and marched through picket lines formed by inside workers. There had been scuffles on Thursday when carriers crossed lines to get to work.

OTTAWA (CP) — Smooth labor-management relations in the fiscal year ended March 31 helped reduce the post office deficit to $559 million, the post office said in its 1977-78 annual report tabled Friday in the Commons.

The report, released in the midst of a widespread illegal strike by inside postal workers, painted an optimistic picture of post office operations.

"The past year is one of which Canada Post employees can be proud," the report said.

"Strike-free service, the increasingly efficient functioning of the modern facilities, more realistic postal rates and primarily the conscientious work of employees contributed to a decline inthe operating deficit and a reduction in the subsidization of postal service through general taxation."

The report for the current fiscal year will tell a different story.

The generally-moderate Letter Carriers Union of Canada held rotating strikes last month before signing a contract agreement with the government.

And the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) Friday continued to defy a back-to-work order passed by Parliament Wednesday.

Must revive summit, Dayan urges Carter

Colonist wire services

Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan said Friday he and Defence Minister Ezer Weizman would leave Washington today and return home to recommend a new Camp David-style summit to overcome "difficulties" in the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty talks.

Dayan said in order to overcome the snags in the negotiations, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Prime Minister Menachem Begin should hold another summit with President Carter's active participation as an intermediary.

"There are difficulties in the talks but I would not define it as a crisis," he told the Israeli national television in an interview from Washington.

Dayan said he hoped that in the end there would be a treaty but added, "We don't want peace at any price."

"The two delegations do not have the authority to make decisions on their own," he said. "In order to really arrive at an agreement the two heads of state are needed."

He said he "would certainly recommend" that Sadat and Begin finish the job of negotiating a treaty—preferably in Washington—"and President Carter would get involved like he did at Camp David, entering the rooms of one and the other."

Shortly after the Israelis announced their plans to leave Washington, both sides were summoned to the White House for separate talks with President Carter and an Egyptian negotiator said he, too, would leave for consultations in Cairo.

Lung cancer triples in Canadian women

TORONTO (CP) — The number of Canadian women suffering from lung cancer has increased threefold in 15 years and is still rising, says the executive director of the Canadian Cancer Society.

Dr. Robert Macbeth said Friday that from 1960 to 1975 the incidence of lung cancer among men doubled but tripled among women.

Macbeth said Canadian figures compare with those released after a five-year U.S. study which showed an alarming increase in lung cancer among women.

He said that among women there were 10.9 deaths per 100,000 caused by lung cancer in 1975 and 3.6 per 100,000 in 1960. The rate for men increased to 48.2 per 100,000 from 25.22 per 100,000 in 1960.

Picket lines parted by immigrant's fear

But goodwill gesture may not last

Only two of 240 Victoria postal workers bucked the trend Friday and returned to the job—one of them, oddly enough, with the approval of his union.

But that gesture of "good will" was expected to end abruptly because the union didn't think the facts of the case were quite what they had appeared to be.

Officers of the Victoria local of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers agreed to let the man pass through the picket line Friday because he was an immigrant and was afraid he would be deported if he broke the law.

Daniel Stewart, first vice-president of the local, said later, however, that the man was already a naturalized Canadian citizen and as such could not be deported for anything other than a subversive crime. For that reason the union would not likely give approval to further trips through the picket line.

Stewart looked on Friday's action as a sort of one-day "grace period" extended to the man because of his "very real fear."

"As I understand it, he had a very tough time becoming a citizen. After he was here his birth certificate was lost and he had a lot of trouble as a result," said Stewart.

"He is a frightened man. His fear is very real. But since he is now a citizen, it is unfounded."

He said union members would try to convince him that he had nothing to be afraid of.

Firestone Canada joins massive tire recall

Colonist wire services

Firestone Canada Inc. will announce next week the voluntary recall of an estimated one million of its problem-plagued Firestone 500 steel-belted radial tires, a company spokesman confirmed in Hamilton, Ont., Friday.

Joseph Barbera said the recall will cost Firestone about $23 million.

The announcement followed an agreement between the parent Firestone company and the U.S. government Friday to recall 10 million of the tires in the U.S. at a tax-deductible cost of $230 million to the firm.

Barbera said the company would detail the procedures of the recall and when it will start next week. Owners of new cars that were purchased with the radials on them would probably be sent letters by Firestone telling them what they should do.

U.S. Transportation Secretary Brock Adams said the recall actually involves about 7.5 million tires still in use. Others have been discarded or turned into dealers for adjustments.

Adams said the recall includes a large portion of the 1975 and 1976 production of 500s and Firestone tires sold under other brand names, including Shell Oil Co.'s Super Shell Steel Radials. (In Canada, Uniroyal, not Firestone, manufactures tires sold by Shell.)

Firestone also will recall 1975 and 1976 TPC steel-belted radials which were original equipment on new General Motors cars.

Adams said the U.S. government decided to work out a voluntary agreement with Firestone instead of going to court because it wants to "get those tires off the road. . . We can't measure lives against dollars."

In Akron, Ohio, Firestone Chairman Richard Riley said the company agreed to the recall not because it believes the tires are faulty, but because "there has been so much publicity. . . The thought that there is a defect has been implanted so strongly that we have to convince our customers that we are interested in their welfare."

Steel belted 500s in the five-rib tread design will be included if manufactured before Jan. 1, 1977. Those in the seven-rib tread design and Firestone TPC radials will be in the recall if made before May 1, 1976. Tires made after those cutoff dates were improved in quality and performance, Adams said.

Persons owning Firestone 500s not included in the recall can bring them in and receive a 50-per-cent adjustment toward purchase of the newer Firestone 721 model, Adams said.

Those who already have traded in defective 500s and paid part of the cost of a new tire will receive a cash payment which will provide them a full refund for their new tire.

Most of the radials involved in the Canadian recall bear the Firestone name although a small number have private brand names, a spokesman said. He refused to name the private brands.

Although the American recall involved an agreement between the company and the government, there have been no negotiations between the Canadian government and Firestone.

13 sailors lost in ship crash

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — The U.S. Coast Guard reported 13 of its men missing in the upper Chesapeake Bay off Smith Point on Friday night after the coast guard cutter Cuyahoga collided with the coal freighter Santa Cruz II and sank in 12 metres of water. Seventeen men were rescued.

Yukon chief charged in mining case

WHITEHORSE Yukon (CP) — Art Pearson, who stepped aside as Yukon commissioner Thursday, was charged Friday with four criminal offences relating to mining claims.

RCMP said the charges were laid at a private session between RCMP Sgt. George Wool, head of the commercial crime section here, and a Whitehorse justice of the peace.

RCMP said the charges are issuing a false statement, uttering forged documents and two others relating to affidavits. The charges are connected with the transfer of mining claims nine years ago, long before Pearson became commissioner.

Pearson said Thursday that he was stepping aside as commissioner because his lawyer informed him that the charges were pending. A wildlife biologist, he was appointed commissioner in July 1976.

RCMP also laid eight charges against Fred Stretch, a notary public here in connection with the Pearson charges.

Pearson's administration has been marred by controversy over allegations of improprieties involving a Whitehorse lawyer.

The lawyer, Al Lueck, was charged with unprofessional conduct in 1977 when he held a news conference to announce his resignation as lawyer for the Council of Yukon Indians.

The Yukon legal department said Lueck breached solicitor-client conduct by making certain remarks at the conference.

The charges later were withdrawn and there were allegations that Pearson, a personal friend, had ordered the territorial legal department to stop the proceedings.

An inquiry said Pearson made errors in judgment in the Lueck affair but had not committed any breaches of duty. Pearson announced he was quitting, however, saying he didn't want the controversy to be an issue in the Yukon election.

The election was to be held Nov. 20 and Pearson agreed to stay on until federal Northern Affairs Minister Hugh Faulkner found a successor.

Pearson talked to Faulkner Wednesday and it was agreed that assistant commissioner Doug Bell would take over the Yukon administration.

OTTAWA (CP) — A transport department official Friday criticized the United States auto safety agency for forcing Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. to recall 10 million of its 500-line steel-belted radials when the agency had failed to find anything wrong with tested tires.

Harold Scharbach, a compliance auditor with the road and motor vehicle traffic safety branch, said the method the U.S. National Highway Traffic Safety Administration in Washington used to reach its decision is unprecedented.

"It's unprecedented that (there has been) a recall based on, well, I wouldn't want to say hearsay, but this method based on surveys (of complaints) has never been used before."

Scharbach said his department has not found any inherent defect in the tires it has tested and that the U.S. auto safety agency hasn't either.

"The U.S. didn't find a defect," he said, adding that he didn't think the safety administration had even bothered to test the tires extensively, basing its judgment instead on information gathered from Firestone itself, other tire manufactures and consumers.

Firestone and the U.S. government announced Friday that the company will voluntarily recall 10 million tires—the largest such recall in history—and replace them free with the new line Firestone 721 radials.

The U.S. safety administration first recommended the tires be recalled in July after analysing 6,000 consumer reports alleging "more than 14,000 individual tire failures, 29 deaths, more than 50 injuries and hundreds of property damage accidents."

But Scharbach said his department had regularly found signs of abuse or neglect such as nail holes in tires it had tested after receiving consumer complaints.

Scharbach said one reason the U.S. agency called for the recall was because the company had replaced more tires for unsatisfied customers than other tire manufacturers surveyed.

"Firestone has a very generous replacement policy," he said. "They replace everything. So of course they're going to have a higher replacement rate than another manufacturer with a different policy.

Family found dead by grave of daughter

BARRYVILLE, N.B. (CP) — "Two of the kids were in the front and three in the back," a nine-year-old resident of this community said Friday night. "I thought they were asleep."

The boy was describing how, as he walked through a churchyard in this northeastern New Brunswick village on his way to school Friday he found a car with the bodies of a man and his five children.

RCMP later said Alvin Brideau, 44, and the children—ranging in age from 10 to two years—died as a result of asphyxiation. The father had taken his children for a drive, waited until they were asleep and then parked the car with the engine running, connected a pipe to the exhaust system and ran it into the passenger compartment.

Brideau had parked the car directly in front of the grave of another of his children, a young daughter, who was killed last year in a house fire.

Neighbors say he had been depressed since his wife left him about 10 days ago and went to Nova Scotia. He took the children everywhere he went in the family car, afraid they would be taken away by welfare officials.

CUPW vows court fights

argument after Duffy asked them to leave.

Duffy said the room is regarded as part of the Press Gallery facilities and not open to the general public.

With cameras rolling, Parrot said he was not worried about workers going back to work in a few smaller centres.

Some also went back during the seven-week strike in 1975, "but we always had more than 95 per cent on the street and we will have more than 95 per cent out this time, too."

When a reporter said 2,000 workers had returned to their jobs, Parrot shot back: "That's a lie."

He said workers in Sault Ste. Marie, Ont. had voted 100 per cent to stay off the job "and they said if they were thrown in jail, their wives would take over the picket line duty."

The back-to-work bill provides for appointment of a mediator-arbitrator who would have authority to make binding rulings on all contract clauses that could not be settled through mediation.

The bill stipulates that the collective agreement would be retroactive to June 30, 1977—when the last contract expired—and would stay in effect until the end of 1979.

Parrot said the bill "retroactively eliminates the choice we were given under the Public Service Staff Relations Act between the arbitration and conciliation-strike routes in the event of a dispute."

"The law is highly discriminatory and the union is attacking its validity in court."

The union chose the conciliation-strike route when it served notice to bargain, meaning that the workers could withdraw their labor if they were unable to negotiate a satisfactory contract.

After the failure Monday night of a final negotiation attempt by acting labor minister Andre Ouellet, the union called its members out on a national strike.

On Tuesday, the government introduced its back-to-work bill in the Commons and by 12:01 a.m. Thursday it was law.

Parrot said the bill, which stripped workers of their legal right to strike and overruled the union's earlier decision to take the conciliation-strike route, was "in total violation of the United Nations International Bill of Human Rights, which every free society supports and which condemns both retroactivity in the law and special legislation designed to eliminate the rights of a single group in society."

The union president said CUPW will oppose any application for injunctions to stop picket line activity.

"Our lawyers across the country are ready and available to fight if the government proceeds with its plans to file for injunctions.

"Our rights to freely associate, to negotiate and to strike are basic—all 23,000 of our members will stand firm to maintain these rights, as will their union and the entire labor movement."

Executives of the 2.3-million-member Canadian Labor Congress met all afternoon to discuss the CUPW situation and in the end decided not to issue a public statement.

The application for a back-to-work injunction in Toronto will be heard in provincial court Monday. The application for the Toronto injunction named 16 officers or CUPW members who had resisted the back-to-work legislation.

Larry Olsson of Toronto, Ontario regional director of the justice department, said the individuals were union officials and members who had been seen on picket lines.

In the Commons Friday, Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne said the government had temporarily held off measures against the strikers to give them an opportunity to return to work.

Lamontagne has accused union leaders of intimidating the members.

Parrot heatedly denied that Friday, saying the government was the party guilty of using threats and intimidation.

"As far as the injunctions are concerned, it is by no means sure that the court will buy the governments arguments. When CUPW was on strike in 1974, the government tried to get injunctions forcing us to remove the picket lines twice."

Parrot said the government's first attempt in 1974 for a back-to-work injunction failed. The second time the judge "refused to issue the injunction for seven days, saying he was forcing a delay because he felt it would be far better if the government resolved the issue by mediation than by coercion."

Lamontagne said in the Commons a militant minority of postal workers were preventing the others from returning to work.

Lincoln Alexander (PC—Hamilton West) criticized the government for "foot-dragging" in moving to end the illegal strike.

John Fraser (PC—Vancouver South) asked why the government had not yet named the mediator-arbitrator to be appointed under the act.

have the future we all hope for."

The premier attends a first minister's conference in Ottawa at month-end.

Displaying rare oratorial form, the premier said his government had "one single goal—a secure future for all British Columbians with opportunity for all."

Without mentioning the party by name he attacked the NDP for its close alliance with organized labor.

"We are a party of the people," he said. "We will never sell out to any power group. The CCF sold out to a power group and while the group they represent has a strong place in our society, no one group has any greater rights than another.

"We do not close our door on anyone. We welcome all people, whatever their walk of life. Trade unions have a rightful place in our society and no one in this party should ever forget that.

"They have aims and aspirations to which we listen and encourage because hundreds, thousands of our members are staunch trade union supporters.

"But we say—equal opportunity for all, special privilege for none."

In touching on the highlights of his government during the past three years, Bennett said he wanted to see education in B.C. developed to the point where "it will be our greatest legacy when our mandate is through. Our youth will be more secure because they will be educated to work—and the work will be there for them."

He repeated a promise made several times in recent weeks, of tax relief for homeowners next spring.

"There will be help in the next budget," he said. "We want to make sure that you can not only own your own home, but can afford to live in it."

Massey-Ferguson to be sold?

Black boys have 'em buzzing

By CANADIAN PRESS

The buzz phrase in Canadian financial circles in the last week was "what will the Blacks do next?"

Eyebrows shot up when Conrad Black and his brother Montegu engineered a bold deal to buy another major piece of Argus Corp. from their chief rival, Montreal-based Power Corp., headed by industrialist Paul Desmarais.

Power Corp. agreed to sell its shares in Argus for $80 million in cash and notes. The buyer was Ravelston Corp. Ltd., the vehicle the Blacks used to take control of Argus in a coup last spring.

With the deal, Ravelston will own about 88 per cent of Argus common shares and 60 per cent of its C preferred shares.

Speculation is that Power sold out to get cash to help pay for the $70 million it spent three years ago in an aborted attempt to wrest control of Argus, based in Toronto.

Montegu Black is president and director of Ravelston which he and his brother control. Conrad Black is president and chairman of the executive committee of Argus.

With their bitter rival, Power Corp., out of the way, the question now is what more do the Blacks have in mind for Argus, the giant holding company whose interests include mining, broadcasting, and manufacturing.

One of their major concerns is Massey-Ferguson Ltd., the multinational farm machinery manufacturer which lost $145 million in the last nine months. Analysts believe the Blacks won't want to sell Massey-Ferguson at this time because it would not bring a high enough price.

Another possibility being raised is that Argus will sell its 17 per cent interest in Domtar Ltd. A potential buyer of Domtar is Consolidated-Bathurst Ltd., the forest products subsidiary of Power Corp.

Argus apparently is in need of cash to finance a proposal to increase its stake in Hollinger Mines Ltd. Under the deal, Argus would increase its interest in Hollinger to about 26 per cent from 24 per cent with the right of first refusal to buy another 14 per cent.

Western —after flip

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Two men who make six-figure salaries and run multimillion-dollar businesses flipped a coin Thursday to decide a matter of billing.

The result: The seventh-largest U.S. airline will be called Western Continental.

The coin flippers were Western Airlines Chairman Art Kelly and Continental Airlines Chairman Robert Six, who — if they get all the required government approvals — are merging their airlines.

The question was whether to call it Western Continental or Continental Western Airlines.

"Since this is a consolidation of the two companies rather than a take-over by either, we wanted to make certain that the new name would be fair to both." Kelly and Six said.

While employees of both airlines watched, Airport Manager Clifton Moore flipped a $20 gold piece from 1903, the year of the Wright Brothers' historic flight.

Before they can merge, the proposal must be approved by the Civil Aeronautics Board, the president and the stockholders of the two lines.

Dollar slides to new lows at week's end

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. dollar hit a new low against the West German mark Friday and continued to slide against most other currencies abroad and in New York while gold prices climbed.

In Montreal the Canadian dollar rallied on international money markets Friday and closed at 84.42 cents against its American counterpart, up nearly an eighth of a cent from Thursday's close of 84.30 cents.

Trading in the currency was light as traders for Canada's chartered banks held an annual closed-door meeting in Toronto to discuss the dollar's plight.

In Frankfurt, the U.S. dollar fell to a record low of 1.8110 marks, down from 1.8390 at Thursday's close. In later New York trading, the dollar finished at 1.8077 marks, down from 1.8322.

In Zurich, gold bullion closed at $228.125 U.S. ($265 Canadian) a troy ounce, up from $226.125 at the previous close. In London, Europe's other major bullion market, the price was $228.00 compared to $226.50.

The all-time closing high for gold was $229.125, set Wednesday in Zurich.

AMC picks new boss

DETROIT (AP) — American Motors Corp. has hired a new president and promoted president Gerald Meyers to chairman, the auto-maker announced Friday.

The new chairman is Gerald Meyers, 49, who succeeds Roy Chapin, chairman for 11 years. Chapin announced last month he was leaving active participation in AMC management but he remains a part-time consultant.

W. Paul Tippett, 45, executive vice-president of the Singer Co., was elected to the No. 2 spot and named chief operating officer by the AMC board.

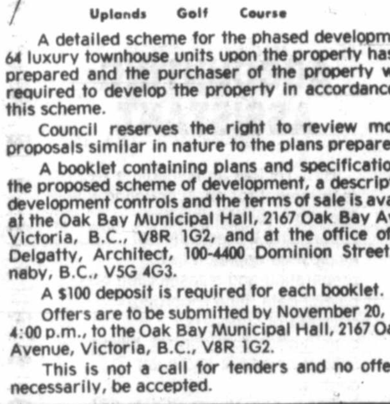
FOR SALE

The Corporation of the District of Oak Bay invites offers to purchase the following property:

9.3 acres located on Cedar Hill Cross Road, lying adjacent to and north of Uplands Golf Course and known as the Riding Academy lands.

The property is legally described as Lot 1, Plan 7571, Victoria District and is shown on the plan below.



A detailed scheme for the phased development of 64 luxury townhouse units upon the property has been prepared and the purchaser of the property will be required to develop the property in accordance with this scheme.

Council reserves the right to review modified proposals similar in nature to the plans prepared.

A booklet containing plans and specifications for the proposed scheme of development, a description of development controls and the terms of sale is available at the Oak Bay Municipal Hall, 2167 Oak Bay Avenue, Victoria, B.C., V8R 1G2, and at the office of Vern Delgatty, Architect, 100-4400 Dominion Street, Burnaby, B.C., V5G 4G3.

A $100 deposit is required for each booklet.

Offers are to be submitted by November 20, 1978 at 4:00 p.m., to the Oak Bay Municipal Hall, 2167 Oak Bay Avenue, Victoria, B.C., V8R 1G2.

This is not a call for tenders and no offer will, necessarily, be accepted.

Special occasion today

Malaspina arboretum is a growing thing

NANAIMO — Students, faculty, staff and friends of Malaspina College are being invited to join forces in an intensive one-day work party to help develop the arboretum now being established on a 120-acre block of land adjacent to the northern boundary of the new campus.

Arboretum Day is being organized today by forestry instructor Fred Marshall. He has already invited some 40 first-and-second-year forest resources students to spearhead the work force and to provide leadership and direction for the individual work groups.

Marshall is also supervising four students working 10 hours a week each on the project under a college work study program, but feels that many more hands are required to make significant progress at this stage.

The college's student society is throwing its weight behind the plan and has guaranteed to provide free food and coffee for all the workers. Campus recreation is arranging a number of special events to promote Arboretum Day and posters will be displayed around the campus urging students to do all they can to support the development of what will be a unique community asset.

Marshall stresses that the work project is by no means limited to students, faculty and staff.

"We know there are lots of people out in the community who take great pride in the college and we would love to see them and their families up here for the day.There is going to be plenty of work for everyone and I know there is a great deal of satisfaction to be gained from getting involved in something like this."

He is asking everyone who is prepared to lend a hand, even for half a day or a couple of hours, to come to the central square outside the cafeteria administration building. A control centre will be set up there and volunteers will be assigned to work groups and directed to specific locations around the arboretum.

Marshall
... big day today

Some tools will be available but people who are in a position to provide shovels, axes, wheelbarrows and saws are asked to bring them along. Work clothes and heavy shoes or boots are recommended and a strong pair of work gloves will be a definite asset.

Arboretum Day will go ahead rain or shine and the main emphasis will be on tree and brush cutting, clearing and burning, trail building and general tidying up in various parts of the site, one that includes a pleasing balance of natural forest, open grassland and a marsh area that continues on to join with Buttertubs Marsh.

Malaspina College is fortunate to have a ready-made location for an Arboretum right on campus and is determined to make the most of the opportunity to create a significant ecological reserve that will tie in with the existing Morrell Wildlife Sanctuary, which extends over some 250 acres, and the adjacent Buttertubs Wildfowl Sanctuary, which covers about 30 acres.

A detailed map of the arboretum has already been prepared by forestry student Siggi Kemmler, indicating existing roads and trails along with the boundary of the timbered area and proposed trails.

Eventually these will all be clearly marked, existing tree species will be identified and new species will be introduced. There are also plans to build benches, rest areas and some simple shelter structures.

The arboretum is seen as a natural extension of the forestry department's program of community education in natural resources, especially in the areas of forest apppreciation and management.

As it becomes better and better established, it will be used for regular college classes, i.e. forestry, biology, geography and geology, as well as by schools and other community groups.

An arboretum resource centre, which will be located close to the biology museum and the environmental sciences building, is also planned.

This will be situated at the entrance to the arboretum and will be of log construction, providing a meeting place for visiting groups and classes.

It will also be used as a display area for botanical specimens and other items related to forestry and natural resources.

Teacher seeking Tory nomination

COURTENAY — Harry Harris, local teacher and former city alderman, has announced his intention to seek the Progressive-Conservative nomination for the next provincial election.

Harris has been active as president of the Comox-Powell River federal constituency association for the past two years.

A former long-time supporter of the CCF and NDP parties, he dropped out of active participation several years ago. In 1969 he was the NDP candidate in Comox.

The stand of provincial Tory leader Vic Stephens is endorsed by Harris, who says he is thoroughly "disgusted with the confrontation and disruptive, non-productive conflict" between the NDP and Social Credit party.

Harris believes many voters want an alternative, as the other two parties have become so similar. He expects the Conservatives to build on Stephens' strong showing in 1975 and be a serious contender to win the Comox riding in the next election. Harris has been a resident of Courtenay for 26 years.

The date of Nov. 25 has been set for the nomination day for Conservatives in the Comox riding. If no nominee is declared from the Parksville-Qualicum area, the meeting will be held in Courtenay.

At the founding meeting of the party in the new riding, Dale McCartney, Courtenay, was elected president; Sandra Anderson, Parksville, vice-president; Laurie Wyles, Minto, secretary; and Earle Maynes, Jack Welsh and Harris all of Courtenay, and Stephen Evans, Cumberland, as directors.

Teachers keep pressing for weekly release time

NANAIMO — District teachers are pressing the school board to make a decision on their request for two hours of release time a week for elementary teachers.

Gordon Sandborn, vice-president of the Nanaimo District Teachers Association, told the school board this week that the teachers are cocerned about the apparant lack of concrete action on the request.

A special committee of the NDTA worked on the proposal, which was presented to the school board last spring.

The NDTA told the board that elementary teachers have no time for the many duties associated with their teaching jobs, and that some time was needed to release them from the classroom to carry out these associated professional duties.

Sandborn said that the NDTA has assigned the request its highest priority for 1978-79.

"There is no concrete evidence that the trustees support this priority," he said.

"Instead we hear of expanded district programs in music, French and physical education. We are concerned that program expansions such as these will have the result of placing even more pressure on the already-overloaded schedule of elementary teachers."

The NDTA was surprised by the estimate that it could cost as much as $451,000 a year, Sandborn added.

He said that the teachers believed that the two hours' release time could be provided at a much lower cost.

A meeting Thursday night of the NDTA considered ways for the release time to be provided within existing resources.

Trustee Ross Fraser said that he believed the board had not pushed the issue aside, but had placed it on the agenda for the finance committee to consider for next year's budget.

Politics calling valley veteran

Gerry Smith, former mayor of North Cowichan, has decided to again try entering the political arena.

The 21-year council veteran, with 10 of those years spent as mayor, said that he would be filing for alderman for North Cowichan.

Smith was defeated last year in the mayoralty race, by persistent mayoralty opponent George Whittaker.

Smith said since his defeat last year, he had been asked to seek several political positions, "but my main political interests have always been here in the municipality."

Smith said one of the first problems he would tackle if elected would be Crofton's water supply.

"But I would work for the whole valley, not just one area," Smith said.

Meanwhile, Nanaimo school board chairman William Holdom says Education Minister Pat McGeer has disallowed application by Nanaimo school district to reduce its board membership to seven from nine.

Holdom said although the department previously indicated support, McGeer exercised his authority as minister to quash the idea.

Holdom said McGeer objected because of the nearness of board elections in November but invited further discussions at a later date.

And in Zeballos, the seaplane dock will be upgraded, thanks to a $31,000 provincial government grant.

The money, from the $5 million air transport assistance program, will be used for reconstruction of the floats, ramp and car deck.

Fire sparks hot poster entries

Fire prevention can be fun as well as serious business, as seven Nanaimo pupils have found out. A poster contest, sponsored by Nanaimo fire department to mark fire prevention week, resulted in prizes for seven elementary school children and trip to downtown Nanaimo fire station for five winners. Pictured with their prize-winning posters in fire department's antique fire truck, back row from left, Ralph Pomphrey, Rock City; Wendy Shook, Harewood; Cheryl Paitson, Departure Bay. Front, Michelle Bennett, Mount Benson and Tammy Clark, Georgia Avenue. Prize winners not in picture were Mount Benson's Terry Thompson and Monica Lauriente.

Shabby block would bloom

Port Alberni is excited about mall bid

PORT ALBERNI — A new $5 million shopping mall is being proposed to upgrade a now-shabby block in the heart of the downtown shopping district.

According to a report, Victoria entrepreneur Bill McBay is merely waiting for the outcome of negotiations with the nine property owners in the block bounded by Argyle Street, 4th Avenue, 3rd Avenue and Angus Street for options to purchase before proceeding with construction of a three-storey mall to house some 20 stores.

McBay recently opened a retail store in the downtown area on 3rd Avenue and is quoted as saying that he does not seek any personal profit from the venture, but that being in business in the community, he simply felt that "somebody should get up and do something."

He has been successful in obtaining options from some of the owners but is still negotiating with others. Mayor Jim Robertson has confirmed that he has approached the city to sell the two lots that it owns in the block.

McBay refused to disclose any details of the property negotiations, but confirmed that the property costs would be above the $5 million he is estimating for actual construction of the mall.

As for the makeup of the new mall, McBay says he is looking for a "good mix" of shops to complement those already in the downtown area.

No major department store will be included, as the downtown is already serviced by Woodward's, just a block away from the proposed poject.

McBay is quoted as saying that he does not conceive of the new mall as a competitor for the huge new Royal Oak shopping mall currently under construction on the edge of the city.

"If the downtown has something to offer the people, I don't think there will be any problems with the (Royal Oak) mall."

Official reaction to McBay's plans is most favorable. Mayor Robertson is quoted as saying that the idea is "almost too good to be true."

"Since my term in office as mayor, we've been trying strenuously to clean up that block," says Robertson.

McBay says that as soon as the negotiations with the owners are complete, demolition and construction will start "immediately."

Classy step for French

NANAIMO — This school district could become one of the first to offer core curriculum classes in French, if enough Francophone students can be found for the classes.

A meeting has been set for Nov. 9, to be jointly sponsored by the Nanaimo school district and the local Francophone society, to see if there is enough local interest in the program.

The French core curriculum program would provide normal classroom instruction entirely in French, and would be for students who already understand French.

If 10 or more French-speaking students in kindergarten through Grade 7 are found for the program, then the school board is eligible for the provincial funding for the class.

The school board voted this week to co-sponsor the Nov. 9 meeting.

Earlier in the week, the school district was visited by Dick Ardanaz, director of French programs in B.C., who explained the core curriculum program.

The school board this week also formally approved a set of recommendations dealing with the entire French program in School District 68.

Those resolutions outline the district's determination to move toward the day when French will be included in the classwork of every student, with the goal of having Grade 12 students who although not bilingual, have a good background in French.

To move toward that goal, the district will investigate the ideas of a summer school for French and a late immersion program for grades 6 and 7.

There is already an immersion program in the district, which started last year in kindergarten at Pauline Haarer school and has now moved into first grade.

The district will also investigate the availability of federal funds to pay for courses for elementary teachers who wish to upgrade their French, so they can include it in their class work.

In other business, the school board approved another set of recommendations that were designed to give support to the district's Action Nanaimo program.

That program, which began as a pilot project in several of the district's schools, will now be expanded to all elementary schools.

The Action Nanaimo program provides daily physical education for all elementary students, and has been popular in the schools where it was first tried.

To support the expansion of the program to the other elementary schools, the school board is encouraging schools to have a qualified physical education specialist on staff and will consider hiring three more specialists to visit schools to help get the programs started.

The question of hiring the three specialists, along with financial support for workshops, and the appointment of a co-ordinator of volunteers have been referred to the board's finance committee for possible inclusion in the 1979 budget.

Exit time for colorful alderman

By DEREK RHIND
Colonist Correspondent

DUNCAN — The colorful and often-controversial North Cowichan alderman and Cowichan estuary environmentalist Birgitte Meagher, has decided she's "had enough of municipal politics."

A member of council for four years, she told the Colonist: "I'm fed up and thoroughly frustrated with the lack of progress that North Cowichan council is making."

She complained that "in this district (North Cowichan), far too much emphasis is placed on personalities rather than issues."

Ald. Meagher said she had entered politics to try to have a community plan for North Cowichan accepted by council.

She said the plan was prepared by Victoria's Chris Foord, "but it has been largely ignored and ridiculed by council."

Foord's plan was based on a questionnaire distributed through North Cowichan by the advisory planning commission.

"Council didn't like the results. Since it has come to council they've belittled the planner and basically changed it back to what they wanted in the first place — a non-plan," she said.

"One of the questions in the survey dealt with council's communications with the people. Some 71 per cent of the people said they felt communications should be improved; that council should listen more to the people.

"I feel the five year of work I've spent working for the community plan hasn't achieved the desired result. It's frustrating.

"I've certainly found that I couldn't convince some members of council that it was daylight outside, no matter how hard I tried," she said.

Ald. Meagher said she was frustrated and her usefulness on council was nullified, because "whenever something came to a vote and I supported it, the subject would mostly be outvoted, just because I favored it."

Ald. Meagher, sometimes called a "troublemaker" by other members of council, added: "The labelling of people is a deplorable tactic used to avoid listening to what that person has to say.

"To stamp them negative, anti-growth, un-Canadian and a troublemaker — all these labels have been applied to me by my fellow members of council — is nothing short of ridiculous.

"All this was done with an attempt to, or the principle of, killing the messenger, because the problems are still there, whether we talked about them or not.

"I find it so sad that we do not learn from the mistakes made in other areas. People are leaving the cities because of the lack of quality of life, yet we are implementing so many of the things that made these people leave the cities."

The formation of a joint utilities board between North Cowichan and Duncan is one of the few accomplishments Ald. Meagher sees in her four years on council.

She said she wanted to set the record straight, however, "at the time when Duncan and North Cowichan were considering sewer upgrading near their borders. Ken Paskin suggested to us it would be better going together. We as a council decided there was no advantage."

"Some comments were made that I checked out with the city engineers. They were surprised that North Cowichan wouldn't participate. I went back and got two copies of our sewer improvements. I took one to Duncan and the other to the regional board. Duncan was just going to tender on their own but after looking at our plans, they found it would save North Cowichan about a half-million dollars going together. Ken Paskin then called a meeting and pointed out the savings."

She continued: "At our next meeting, I told them (North Cowichan) I had taken our plans to Duncan. I was called unethical . . . well, you name it. Yet, the next election everyone was up proudly saying we finally had a joint utilities board, after tearing me to shreds for facilitating it."

The alderman predicts an "incredible" general tax increase within five years because of the "helter-skelter" developments that are still being allowed.

She said she had been "deeply touched" by the warmth and support she had received from the community during her years of office.

When asked what her plans for the future were, she replied: "I'm just going to enjoy life, before the politicians ruin it totally and irrevocably."

Commenting on North Cowichan's possible council makeup after the November municipal elections, she said: "Although at this stage I do not know who the canditates will be, I predict that former mayor Gerry Smith will be elected and that Smith will run for mayor one year from now."

Closer look at tow boats?

NANAIMO — If a federal inquiry is to be held into the beer bottle and egg battle of tugs at sea last January, the inquiry should investigate the whole question of problems in the Vancouver Island tow boat industry, not just the one incident.

That is the opinion of a former officer of the Canadian Merchant Service Guild's western branch.

The former officer, who prefers to remain unnamed, said that there's much more that should be looked into than just the one incident where beer bottles and eggs were thrown at the Broughton Towing tug Kyuquot.

Broughton Towing is suing Chemainus Towing for $70,000 over the incident.

The source agreed with Gary Urton of Chemainus Towing that there is much more to the story than appears on the surface.

And, he said, it would be unfair for the inquiry, which is to be held by the federal ministry of transport, to be held without looking at the entire tow boat industry on Vancouver Island.

He said that he is afraid the inquiry will be held quietly, and without publicity, and that officers could lose their tickets, and thus their livelihood, without a complete hearing.

He said that he believes there are infractions of federal government shipping regulations in the tow boat industry on Vancouver Island and that this has contributed to the tension.

He said that he did not wish to side with either Broughton Towing of Chemainus Towing in the dispute over the incident, but that he belived some of the statements made by Ridge Wilson of Broughton were not totally correct.

For instance, he said, he does not think Broughton and Chemainus are in direct competition, since Chemainus Towing does its own work, and is not bidding on contracts that Broughton would be interested in.

The ministry of transport seems to have mostly ignored Vancouver Island when it comes to enforcing tow boat regulations, he charged.

He said that there has not been enough publicity of the problems, but that people were reluctant to talk.

He added that he hopes the union can be convinced to make a statement on the matter.

As for the inquiry, he said, if the taxpayers are footing the bill, they should get their money's worth and the entire Island industry should be investigated.

The inquiry, which was originally scheduled for Oct. 1, and was set back to Nov. 1 and 2, will now be held Dec. 4 and 5.

Wilson agreed that there is much more to the affair than meets the eye, but he said that he thinks an inquiry on the entire industry is not necessary.

He described the problems as more ones of competition than ones of safety or regulation-breaking.

He added that he believes the four ministry of transport steamship inspectors on the Island do a good job, and has no complaints about the way the industry is policed.

Wilson added that Broughton Towing is in direct competition with Chemainus Towing, contrary to the opinion expressed by the former merchant guild officer.

Wilson said that an inquiry into the tow boat industry on Vancouver Island might be helpful, but that he believes it is not of high priority.

For instance, he said, he believes there are more safety problems in the fishing industry than in the tow boat industry.

As for the competition aspect, he said, "that's nothing to do with the MoT really."

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

IT'S OFFICIAL: NO VOTE IN '78

VANCOUVER — It's now official — there will not be a provincial election in B.C. this year.

Premier Bennett, who has been saying for the last two weeks that election speculation was created by the media not himself, finally gave a flat "no" to election questions.

Before Friday, he had contended himself with "I am not thinking about an election, I am not talking about an election," but he always left the possibility that there could be.

At a press conference after his speech to the annual Social Credit convention here, he provided the standard answer first, but when reporters repeated "Will there be an election this year?" he smiled and said "There could be a federal election and there will be municipal elections."

"Will there be a provincial election?"

"No."

'We won't mortgage the future'

SOCREDS CHEER BENNETT'S RESTRAINTS POLICY

By JIM HUME
Colonist reporter

VANCOUVER — Close to 1,500 delegates to the annual Social Credit convention here Friday gave a wild standing ovation to Premier Bennett's pledge that "we will not mortgage the future of our young."

Bennett made the emotional pledge at the midway point in his keynote speech to the 1,450 delegates registered by 11 a.m.

"We will not be party to reckless spending, wild spending, stupid spending," he said. "We will not mortgage the future of our young to the money-lenders. No way. We will deliver the services our people need and we will do it without creating a burden of crushing debt.

● Other Socred convention on stories Page 6.

"We have seen what the burden of debt has done to young countries, young governments. We will not let it happen here."

The premier, whose speech was interrupted throughout with applause, promised to continue his efforts to eliminate red tape in government — "red tape which throttles opportunity. We will give you good government, but less government."

The premier drew laughter and applause from a challenge issued to Opposition leader David Barrett whose New Democratic Party recently published a pamphlet critical of government activities.

"I'll make an offer to Mr. Barrett," the premier said. "If he will deliver the pamphlets to us I'll give him a personal guarantee that we will deliver them for him, during our operation doorstep, to every household in the province—because those leaflets say much more about them than about us."

Operation doorstep is a Social Credit door-knocking campaign which promises to cover every household in the province over the next several months.

Bennett said the NDP leaflet "does not contain one positive thought." It is full of criticism, negatives, without one single positive proposal. It tells us a great deal about them at a time when positive proposals, positive thinking is needed as never before in this country.

"They don't deserve to be the alternative to government in this province."

The premier continued to hammer away at his ideas on constitutional reform but suggested that delegates not become confused with technicalities.

"What we are asking is a fair voice in the council of Canada," he said. "We ask only a fair voice in our country's affairs. I will take that message to Ottawa again on your behalf.

"They (the federal government) cannot ignore the West any longer. Other voices should not be louder than ours.

"Our country will remain strong only as long as its parts are strong. If the parts grow weak, then we shall not

CUPW president Parrot
. . . 'only slaves cannot withdraw their labor'

CUPW vows court battles over law, injunction bids

OTTAWA (CP) — The defiant Canadian Union of Postal Workers said Friday it will challenge the government's back-to-work bill in court and will keep workers on illegal picket lines despite the fact that the government is seeking injunctions to break the strike.

CUPW President Jean-Claude Parrot said in a news conference the workers will stay out as long as it takes them to get a collective agreement.

"You want to mail a letter? Just try it," Parrot said when asked if the majority of the 23,000 workers would stay out despite the back-to-work orders.

Parrot said at a news conference the union is hiring lawyers to fight government applications for injunctions to stop picketing at postal facilities across the country.

The first such application was made in Toronto late Friday. Others were due in Halifax, Montreal, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

At the same time the union planned to challenge the entire back-to-work bill passed by Parliament Wednesday.

"Only slaves cannot withdraw their labor and postal workers will never agree to become slaves," said the tough-talking Parrot.

Justice Minister Otto Lang had announced in the Commons earlier Friday that officials from his department were gathering evidence to use against strikers violating the provisions of back-to-work legislation passed by Parliament Wednesday.

He said the government would seek injunctions to stop picketing and thus permit those CUPW workers who wanted to return to work to do so.

Under the legislation union members face fines of $100 a day for every day they are on an illegal strike.

The union leaders face a fine of $2,500 plus $250 a day and the union itself could pay $10,000.

Several of Lang's officials turned up in the small interview room in the basement of the Parliament Buildings where Parrot spoke with reporters.

Before the news conference started, the justice department officials were requested to leave by Mike Duffy, a CBC television reporter and an executive of the press gallery.

Parrot had told Duffy he would rather give his interview without the justice department officials in the room and they left without

On Island, some on job, most off

This was the situation Friday on Vancouver Island and throughout B.C., as seen by postal workers and post office management:

A management spokesman said workers were on the job in 31 of the province's 60 post offices. But he conceded that they were located in small centres and involved only a minimum of the province's postal workers.

A union official in Victoria said later that workers who had returned to the job in some areas had since walked out again.

On Vancouver Island, the workers were out in the main centres of Victoria, Duncan, Nanaimo and Port Alberni. But management said they had reported for work at Ladysmith, Parksville, Courtenay and Port Hardy.

LETTER CARRIERS in Ottawa have learned there is safety in numbers. Early Friday morning they assembled in a parking lot near the main post office and marched through picket lines formed by inside workers. There had been scuffles on Thursday when carriers crossed lines to get to work.

OTTAWA (CP) — Smooth labor-management relations in the fiscal year ended March 31 helped reduce the post office deficit to $559 million, the post office said in its 1977-78 annual report tabled Friday in the Commons.

The report, released in the midst of a widespread illegal strike by inside postal workers, painted an optimistic picture of post office operations.

"The past year is one of which Canada Post employees can be proud," the report said.

"Strike-free service, the increasingly efficient functioning of the modern facilities, more realistic postal rates and primarily the conscientious work of employees contributed to a decline in the operating deficit and a reduction in the subsidization of postal service through general taxation."

The report for the current fiscal year will tell a different story.

The generally-moderate Letter Carriers Union of Canada held rotating strikes last month before signing a contract agreement with the government.

And the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) Friday continued to defy a back-to-work order passed by Parliament Wednesday.

Must revive summit, Dayan urges Carter

Colonist wire services

Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan said Friday he and Defence Minister Ezer Weizman would leave Washington today and return home to recommend a new Camp David-style summit to overcome "difficulties" in the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty talks.

Dayan said in order to overcome the snags in the negotiations, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Prime Minister Menachem Begin should hold another summit with President Carter's active participation as an intermediary.

"There are difficulties in the talks but I would not define it as a crisis," he told the Israeli national television in an interview from Washington.

Dayan said he hoped that in the end there would be a treaty but added, "We don't want peace at any price."

"The two delegations do not have the authority to make decisions on their own," he said. "In order to really arrive at an agreement the two heads of state are needed."

He said he "would certainly recommend" that Sadat and Begin finish the job of negotiating a treaty—preferably in Washington—"and President Carter would get involved like he did at Camp David, entering the rooms of one and the other."

Shortly after the Israelis announced their plans to leave Washington, both sides were summoned to the White House for separate talks with President Carter and an Egyptian negotiator said he, too, would leave for consultations in Cairo.

Lung cancer triples in Canadian women

TORONTO (CP) — The number of Canadian women suffering from lung cancer has increased threefold in 15 years and is still rising, says the executive director of the Canadian Cancer Society.

Dr. Robert Macbeth said Friday that from 1960 to 1975 the incidence of lung cancer among men doubled but tripled among women.

"We are now reaping the harvest of having women take up smoking."

Macbeth said Canadian figures compare with those released after a five-year U.S. study which showed an alarming increase in lung cancer among women.

He said that among women there were 10.9 deaths per 100,000 caused by lung cancer in 1975 and 3.6 per 100,000 in 1960. The rate for men increased to 48.2 per 100,000 from 25.22 per 100,000 in 1960.

Picket lines parted by immigrant's fear

But goodwill gesture may not last

Only two of 240 Victoria postal workers bucked the trend Friday and returned to the job—one of them, oddly enough, with the approval of his union.

But that gesture of "good will" was expected to end abruptly because the union didn't think the facts of the case were quite what they had appeared to be.

Officers of the Victoria local of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers agreed to let the man pass through the picket line Friday because he was an immigrant and was afraid he would be deported if he broke the law.

Daniel Stewart, first vice-president of the local, said later, however, that the man was already a naturalized Canadian citizen and as such could not be deported for anything other than a subversive crime. For that reason the union would not likely give approval to further trips through the picket line.

Stewart looked on Friday's action as a sort of one-day "grace period" extended to the man because of his "very real fear."

"As I understand it, he had a very tough time becoming a citizen. After he was here his birth certificate was lost and he had a lot of trouble as a result," said Stewart.

"He is a frightened man. His fear is very real. But since he is now a citizen, it is unfounded."

He said union members would try to convince him that he had nothing to be afraid of.

Firestone Canada joins massive tire recall

Colonist wire services

Firestone Canada Inc. will announce next week the voluntary recall of an estimated one million of its problem-plagued Firestone 500 steel-belted radial tires, a company spokesman confirmed in Hamilton, Ont., Friday.

Joseph Barbera said the recall will cost Firestone about $23 million.

The announcement followed an agreement between the parent Firestone company and the U.S. government Friday to recall 10 million of the tires in the U.S. at a tax-deductible cost of $230 million to the firm.

Barbera said the company would detail the procedures of the recall and when it will start next week. Owners of new cars that were purchased with the radials on them would probably be sent letters by Firestone telling them what they should do.

U.S. Transportation Secretary Brock Adams said the recall actually involves about 7.5 million tires still in use. Others have been discarded or turned into dealers for adjustments.

Adams said the recall includes a large portion of the 1975 and 1976 production of 500s and Firestone tires sold under other brand names, including Shell Oil Co.'s Super Shell Steel Radials. (In Canada, Uniroyal, not Firestone, manufactures tires sold by Shell.)

Firestone also will recall 1975 and 1976 TPC steel-belted radials which were original equipment on new General Motors cars.

Adams said the U.S. government decided to work out a voluntary agreement with Firestone instead of going to court because it wants to "get those tires off the road. . . We can't measure lives against dollars."

In Akron, Ohio, Firestone Chairman Richard Riley said the company agreed to the recall not because it believes the tires are faulty, but because "there has been so much publicity. . . The thought that there is a defect has been implanted so strongly that we have to convince our customers that we are interested in their welfare."

Those receiving free replacements must own tires manufactured between March 1, 1975 and cutoff dates which vary with different models.

Steel belted 500s in the five-rib tread design will be included if manufactured before Jan. 1, 1977. Those in the seven-rib tread design and Firestone TPC radials will be in the recall if made before May 1, 1976. Tires made after those cutoff dates were improved in quality and performance, Adams said.

Persons owning Firestone 500s not included in the recall can bring them in and receive a 50-per-cent adjustment toward purchase of the newer Firestone 721 model, Adams said.

Those who already have traded in defective 500s and paid part of the cost of a new tire will receive a cash payment which will provide them a full refund for their new tire.

Most of the radials involved in the Canadian recall bear the Firestone name although a small number have private brand names, a spokesman said. He refused to name the private brands.

Although the American recall involved an agreement between the company and the government, there have been no negotiations between the Canadian government and Firestone.
